FRANK CASE MAY GO TO JURY LATE THIS AFTERNOON

SPECIAL MESSAGE ON MEXIC MUDDLE FOR THE CONGRESS

President Wilson at Work on Document and Will Read It in Person to House and Senate.

AMERICAN VIEWPOINT TO BE MADE VERY CLEAR

Congress Rallying to President Since Huerta Has Stated That Public Sentiment Doesn't Approve.

Washington, August 21.—President Wilson was at work tonight on a special message which he probably will read to both houses of congress next Monday, relating in detail the negotiations which have been conducted through his personal representative, John Lind, with the Huerta government in Mexico.

The decision to make a comprehensive statement on the situation to congress was reached today after the president had about concluded that the negotiations between Mr. Lind and Provisional President Huerta since the exchange of notes had developed no new basis for discussion.

Wilson May Read Message.

With his message, the president will present the two notes, setting forth the American suggestions to the Huerta government and its reply. Should he read the document himself, which he is being urged to do by members of his cabinet, and to which idea he is strongly inclined, it will be the first time since the days of George Washington that a president has communicated a matter of foreign policy in person to the legislative branch of the government.

While there was no information from the white house to indicate what object it was hoped to accomplish through a message at this time, there was a well-defined belief in official circles that President Wilson thinks the reading of an address which will lay the American position and the Huerta contentions before congress and the people of this country, and which also will be made public to the world generally, cannot but have an important effect on the situation in Mexico.

Congress Rallies to Wilson.

It is expected to be a partial answer to the intimations of Provisional President Huerta in his note that President Wilson stands alone in his Mexican policy and unsupported generally in congress.

The first reflection of this Huerta supposition came in the senate today when prominent republicans vigorously upheld the hands of the president. The expressions of confidence in the wisdom and good faith of President Wilson were made by several republican leaders in succession, after Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, republican, had introduced a resolution to require the president to place United States troops in Mexico to protect Americans. No action was taken on the resolution, and, though Senator Penrose declared the sending of troops could by resolution be decreed not unfriendly to Mexico, the view at the white house and state department was be that such a move in effect would be an act of war.

No Drastic Measures.

President Wilson reiterated to callers today that he had absolutely no intention of taking any drastic measures, denied that Secretary Garrison, of the war department, had been called back to Washington, and referred to the fact that Mr. Garrison would be vacationing after his inspection trip in the west was ended. He incidentally complimented republican senators on their spirit of co-operation, emphatically stating there had not been the slightest exhibition of partisanship.

That Provisional President Huerta has advanced the idea that recognition of his government is a partisan question in the United States and that the democratic party is not actually dominant, is admitted by administration officials, but they believe that if such an illusion exists in Mexico it shortly will be dissipated, not only by news of today's debate in the senate, but by the expectation that congress in some way will show its confidence in the president when he reads his mes-

SPEER PREPARING TO FIGHT CHARGES

Judge Will Attend Hearings Before Judiciary Committee—Georgia Delegation to Confer About Action.

Washington, August 21.—Federal Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, charged with official misconduct in papers filed with the house committee on judiciary, will attend any hearings that the committee may have to take evidence in the case. He telegraphed today to Representative Hughes, of Georgia, a life-long friend and college classmate, asking that he arrange for his appearance at the proper time. Mr. Hughes immediately conferred with chairman Clayton, of the committee, and later notified Judge Speer that he would be permitted to be present with counsel.

A conference of the Georgia delegation in the house for consideration of the Speer case has been called for tomorrow. The meeting will be held at the capitol and all members of the delegation except Representatives Roddenbery and Edwards, who are out of the city, will attend. The purpose is to consider what course the delegation should adopt in view of the charges made against a federal judge within their state.

It is likely that a subcommittee of two or three will be appointed to review the charges before the committee, a right which Chairman Clayton will accord. The subcommittee will report to the delegation as to whether the charges are sufficiently serious to warrant action, which would probably be in the form of a resolution to be offered in the house by one of their number to impeach the judge. Such a resolution would be referred to the judiciary committee, which will assume consideration of the department of justice report next Monday.

Speer's Son-in-Law Denies Reports.

Macon, Ga., August 21.—(Special.)—A. H. Heyward, Jr., son-in-law of Judge Emory Speer, today gave out a statement in which he brands as false the reports emanating from Washington that the attorney general's special agent in his report to the judiciary contains serious charges against Mr. Heyward.

"Judge Speer needs no defense at my hands," said Mr. Heyward today, "but in so far as the report applies to me I denounce it as maliciously false. I have never been appointed by Judge Speer to any office whatsoever. I have occasionally been elected trustee in bankruptcy by the creditors and have been appointed by the referees as receiver and trustee of bankrupt estates. Judge Speer has never fixed the amount of my fee in any case. No exception to any fee has ever been made by any creditor or other party at interest. My accounts are on file in the court and wholly disprove the reckless statement that I have dissipated estates. If Attorney General McReynolds or his agent, Lee Wallace, can substantiate statements, he is simply trying to divert criticism from himself on account of his officious meddling with the affairs of the United States judiciary."

AS SHE BEGS FOR LIFE HUSBAND KILLS WIFE

Mrs. Ethel Denson on Her Knees in Street When Husband Fired.

Tampa, Fla., August 21.—While on her knees pleading pitifully for her life, Mrs. Ethel Denson, of Key West, was shot to death on the street here tonight by her husband, Benny Denson. Two negroes were eye-witnesses to the tragedy, but were afraid to interfere.

Denson, who followed his wife from Key West here several weeks ago, discovered her working in a restaurant on Franklin street. He threatened to kill her if she did not return with him.

When Mrs. Denson started home her husband was waiting just outside the door, and started after her. She outran him three blocks, but fell on her knees exhausted. Denson rushed up and without a word fired two shots, either of which would have been fatal, physicians say.

Denson has not been captured.

COLE YOUNGER JOINS CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Former Member of the Jesse James Gang Converted at Revival.

Lees Summit, Mo., August 21.—Cole Younger, the former bandit, became a member of the Christian church at a revival meeting here tonight.

When the evangelist after finishing his sermon invited persons in the audience to join the church, Younger was one of the first to go forward to the altar rail.

At the conclusion of the service the evangelist said that those in the audience who cared to do so might remain and shake hands with Younger. There were a thousand persons present and all remained to congratulate the former member of the James gang on his conversion.

THAW IS SCHEMING TO FIX THE POINT OF DEPORTATION

Lawyers Have About Decided That Vermont Offers Opportunities for Thaw to Baffle N. Y. Authorities.

RUMORS OF KIDNAPING EXCITE THE CANADIANS

Thaw Won't Appear in Court Till Next Wednesday and Meanwhile Lawyers Are Perfecting Their Plans.

NO RECONCILIATION WANTED BY EVELYN NESBIT THAW

New York, August 21.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw doesn't want reconciliation with her husband and doesn't believe reports from Sherbrooke that he wants a reconciliation with her.

"The last reports of Harry are simply frightful," she said today. "They are the worst yet. What shall I do if that man gets back to New York? He wants to get free in order that he may take his vengeance and kill me."

Sherbrooke, Quebec, August 21.—Until Wednesday of next week, barring unforeseen developments, Harry Kendall Thaw will remain in the Sherbrooke jail. On that day he is to be arraigned in the superior court on a writ of habeas corpus. Between now and that time his battery of Canadian lawyers hope to perfect plans, not to thwart deportation, but to submit to it gracefully—to a point selected by Thaw.

This, in brief, was the status tonight of Matteawan's fugitive arrested Tuesday near Coaticook, Quebec, and committed to jail here on a deportation warrant pending legal moves made by his lawyers. Thaw has spent his time pacing the length of the narrow corridor in the Sherbrooke jail and was not even aware that the writ of habeas corpus in his case was served on the jailer this afternoon and that but for a timely telephone message he would have been produced in court today with the bench vacant.

How the Incident Arose.

This incident, variously described as a blunder, a case of absent-mindedness and an error due to hurry, arose after Superior Judge Globensky failed to specify in writing that the writ was returnable before him next Wednesday. He had set this date in chambers, but the writ reading "instanter" when served on the jailer, set that official into instant action, and he had called a carriage and ordered Thaw to dress for an outing when Deputy Attorney General Bitt Mr. LaForce, governor of the jail, declined to surrender the prisoner until he had consulted Sheriff Aylmer.

The sheriff, after reading the writ, carefully said that while no time for its return was stated, he had understood from the court that Wednesday was the day and he "allowed" that Thaw had better stay in jail.

Rumors of Kidnaping.

Rumors sprouted meanwhile that the New York authorities were trying to kidnap Thaw; that an automobile was ready to whirl him to the New York line; that an open clash, perhaps in the streets, was imminent. As a matter of fact, the officers from New York were as much surprised as anyone. They had protested against postponing the proceedings until Wednesday, but their protests falling, had decided to bide their time, hoping that when arraigned Thaw would be released as a fugitive and promptly snapped up by the immigration authorities in an undesirable.

The governor of the jail, explaining his difficulties tonight, said:

"Someone representing himself to be Judge Globensky called me on the telephone this afternoon and said Thaw would not need to appear in court before Wednesday. It was not entirely settled as to the time, because I thought he said something about tomorrow. As a matter of fact, I rather doubted that it was Judge Globensky.

"I was confused, particularly when I received another call. This time it was from a man who told me to get under cover because something was going to happen.

"Half an hour later the bailiff appeared and served the habeas corpus papers on me, saying that I was to deliver Thaw immediately. I was as near bewildered then as I ever had been in my life. Within half an hour I had been told to produce him Wednesday, tomorrow, and immediately.

"I found a crowd outside and there were rumors that the prisoner was going to be taken away, out, of course, these were untrue, and I finally straightened matters out by consultation with the sheriff."

Thaw's Lawyers Satisfied.

Thaw's lawyers said tonight they

Harry K. Thaw, His Wife, Mother and Sister And New York Asylum From Which He Fled

MRS. THAW AND DAUGHTER, ALICE

Here are the principals in the newest act of the Thaw drama. Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, whose sensational escape from Matteawan asylum, in New York state, aroused the fear of further attacks on his part, is shown as he looked from his latest picture, taken recently. Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, his wife, who was guarded from possible attack, is shown as she appeared when she arrived in New York from Europe a few weeks ago. Mrs. William Thaw, the mother whose sacrifice of devotion and fortune aroused the sympathy of many, and Harry's sister, Alice, both expressed satisfaction over his escape.

DYNAMITE CHARGE FOR MAYOR GAYNOR

Enough of Explosive to Wreck New York City Hall Found Under Gaynor's Office Window.

New York, August 21.—A deadly charge of dynamite, three whole 10-inch sticks and two halves with a fuse and detonator, was discovered this afternoon near Mayor Gaynor's office window in the city hall. The bureau of combustibles found that the explosive was 40 per cent dynamite, the resulation blasting proportion, and the amount found would, if exploded, have wrecked the city hall.

The mayor was in his office when the dynamite was discovered by a citizen passing through City Hall park. Mr. Gaynor evinced little interest when told of the explosive's proximity and remained apparently undisturbed at his desk while police officers hurriedly drew a cordon about the dynamite to keep back an excited crowd.

No Statement From Gaynor.

Mr. Gaynor frequently receives threatening letters, but tonight he would make no statement regarding the possible connection between any previous threat by mail and the dynamite of today. It is just three years ago this month that he was shot in the neck by a so-called crank and so badly wounded that for several days it was feared he would die.

The dynamite found today lay on a basement door in a concrete coal or area-way within 60 feet of the mayor's window.

The explosive was arranged in a lattice formation with the two small pieces on top. A partly burned 4-inch fuse, made of gun powder tightly rolled in a paper cylinder, led to a detonating cap on one of the half sticks.

Close to the explosive was a piece of Chinese punk and several partly burned matches. The dynamite and fuse were wrapped in a piece of heavy cambric secured by red and blue twine. The cloth was blue with red and white figures and resembled the fillets worn by Italian women of the working class.

How Explosion Was Prevented.

Experts of the bureau of combustibles state that the only thing which prevented a disastrous explosion was the presence of a strip of cotton wool wound so tightly about the base of the fuse that a spark could not reach the detonator. An edge of one dynamite stick was slightly scorched.

The investigators do not attach much importance to the finding of half-burned matches and a partly consumed cigar near the explosive. Hundreds of smokers pass the area-way during the noon hour and some of them occasionally throw dead matches and cigar butts there.

LONGING FOR TOBACCO DROVE HIM TO MURDER

Jeffersonville, Ind., August 21.—Edward Morton, an inmate of the state reformatory here, stabbed and killed Charles Bartle, another inmate, late today. Morton said he bore Bartle no ill will and that he stabbed him so that he could be sent to the Indiana state prison at Michigan City, where the prisoners are given tobacco.

"As I have not long to live, could you not let me have some tobacco?" Morton asked Superintendent D. C. Peyton, when told that Bartle was dead.

Both men had been sentenced to the refromatory on petit larceny and were employed in teh shoe shop. Morton used a shoe knife and drove it into Bartle's back as they came out of the barber shop.

CONVICTS TO BE PUT ON ILLINOIS HIGHWAYS

Springfield, Ill., August 21.—Sentences of prisoners who do good work on state roads will be commuted ten days for each thirty they work on the highways, Governor Dunne announced today. The honor system will be used; convicts whose terms are under five years will be ineligible, and counties which are beneficiaries of the plan will be required to pay 50 cents a day to maintain each convict employed.

The governor recently inspected road work in Colorado and Washington, and said he was impressed by the progress made and the value of employing prison labor in this manner.

Unless all calculations are upset the Frank case should be ready to go to the jury tonight, provided Judge Roan does not decide to postpone his charge until Saturday morning—in which event the case will reach the jury during the forenoon Saturday.

After that time it is all a matter of speculation as to the time the verdict will be returned. It may be returned in a few moments after the jury retires; again, it may be hours or days. The general opinion is, however, that Frank will know his fate some time Saturday.

In Dramatic Phrases Hooper Outlines Events Leading Up to and Following Death of Girl

"Your honor, and gentlemen of the jury," spoke Mr. Hooper, the first of the attorneys to address the court, "the object of this trial, as well as all other trials, is the ascertainment of truth and the attainment of justice. In the beginning, I want to have it understood that we are not seeking a verdict of guilty against the defendant unless he is guilty.

"The burden of guilt is upon our shoulders—we confront the undertaking of putting it upon his. We recognize that it must be done beyond a reasonable doubt, and that it must be done purely by the evidence which we have produced before you.

"We have cheerfully assumed this burden. We have cheerfully undertaken the task, but, there is not a single man on the prosecution who would harm a hair of the defendant's head wrongfully. We want him given the same measure of justice that should be meted to all classes of defendants. He is entitled, though, to the same degree of law as any other prisoner.

"But, he is not entitled to any more because of his wealth or his social position. The arm of the law is strong enough to reach to the highest pinnacle of position and drag down the guilty, and strong enough to probe into the gutter and drag up the lowest.

The Jury's Responsibility.

"There is not a case in the history of Georgia's that has been, as a whole, as important as this. With this importance, there arises a great degree of responsibility that rests upon your shoulders. I call your attention to the facts of law as they will be given you by the charge—especially instructions, the orders by which you will be guided in the end.

"There is one thing I want to say, and that is this: This man should not be convicted purely because the law is seeking a victim. The law doesn't demand it. It demands only that you seek the truth, the absolute truth, the showing of which is required by us, the prosecution.

"We are looking for blood indictment—we are not seeking the slayer of Mary Phagan, and in seeking him, I try as much as possible to feel as though I were one of you twelve.

"Now, let's see what was the situation on April 26 in the pencil factory. This factory was located in the city of Montag as its superintendent, assisted by the handsome Mr. Darley and the able Mr. Schiff.

Conditions Favorable.

"As a citizen of Atlanta, I am not proud of conditions that existed in that factory. What was the general atmosphere? The character of it appeals wonderfully to us as we seek the truth.

"The defense has produced numbers of girl workers who told us of his character. They say it is good. That is only negative because he has never harmed them. They also do not know him. But, we are considering their stories, there are the stories of others —girls who left his factory because of his character and his conduct toward them.

"They say his character is bad. You have from the two the evidence of either. Those who still are there—those who have never been harmed—and those who have left because of him and his character.

"The law is a peculiar thing. We named over our plains with the first witnesses but on cross-examination showed at first just exactly what we had in view, exposed our hand, so to speak, and even went so far as to put the stories before the jury in so far as they were allowed to be told. They could have gone into detail were we permitted to have allowed them. They would have had incidents that would have been convincing."

Arnold's Objection Overruled.

Here Attorney Arnold interrupted the speech, objecting to the remarks of Mr. Hooper, the argument was improper. He was overruled, however.

"So, gentlemen," continued the speaker, "we have shown that the pencil factory was a great place for a man handsome assistant, Mr. Darley, and the able Mr. Schiff. We find that Frank had coupled himself up for nightly meetings with Daisy Hallthaler, who has, it seems, turned respectable. My friends, no doubt, will argue that it was strange a man of such business and social position should consort with such a character. It will be a good argument, likely, but probe a little deeper and see if bullets do not show the kind of man required by a dual personality such as possessed by Frank?

Dual Personalities.

"We all have dual personalities. There is not a man so good without evil, and no man so bad without good. But when the evil predominates that man is bad. Vice versa with the good. A man may mingle with his varnished class by day, but when the shades of night fall the frailties and the evil dominate, he doesn't go and get good men who can tell of his good character. He goes for his fallen. We all are. We walk and talk like. There are two sides to each of us.

"Dalton seems to have overcome this evil. He is apparently making good, as many substantial folks have told us on the witness stand. You can't blame Dalton so much.

"This factory was under the control of this man Frank. It is a house of bad reputation. You find other acts of this sort committed therein. It is unsavory. Frank is its head. He contends he did not know Mary Phagan. Why, every day as he walked through the floor on which his office was situated, he passed by her at her machine. You find, gentlemen, that he often stopped at her place of duty to show her that he knew her that, to help her in her work. Not only that, but he followed her out of her heaten path —following her like some wild animal, telling her of his superiority, coaxing, persuading, all the while she strove to return to her work at her machine.

When Gantt Entered Case.

"You will notice on this diagram that every time he crossed the floor he passed this beautiful girl, looking upon her with the eye of lust. The first indication of his attitude toward his victim is in the tall, good-natured Jim Gantt, friend of Mary. He asks Gantt: 'You're pretty thick with Mary, aren't you?'

"It shows that he knew her and that he had his eye on her.

"What next?

"He wants to get rid of Gantt. How does he go about it? You have seen that previously he was bragging on Gantt, on Gantt's ability as a workman. But, just as soon as his eye is set upon the pretty little friend of Gantt, he sets plans to get rid of him.

"And, it comes up about a dollar.

"He says it was something about money, hoping to lead you, gentlemen, to believe that the trouble was at the factory. But, it was not let Gantt go into the building because he was a 'thief.'

"Didn't he say that this long-legged mountaineer was coming back at him? Sure, he knew it. And, they parted company at once. Gantt was fired.

"What was he accomplishing by this?

"He was getting rid of the only man on either floor—in the whole factory—who knew Mary Phagan, and who would raise a hand to protect her.

Started His Plans.

"Then, he sets about laying plans. And those plans!

"You will notice that the defense has pitched its entire effort entirely on Jim Conley. I don't blame them. He was like Stone Mountain is to some Hawkeyes in Kansas. They couldn't get by him. We could have left him out and have had an excellent chain of circumstantial evidence. Without him, the defense couldn't move —they couldn't budge.

"You have sat and seen the biggest legal battle that has ever been fought in a house between skillful intellect and a witness negro. You have seen brainy influence pitted against the slow, incomprehensible dialect of a negro. You have seen a trained and speedy mind battling with blunt ignorance. And, what was the result?

"At the end of three and a half days it came. That negro was asked questions about everything Rosser could conceive. His answers were hurried from the stenographer's notes and transcribed on typewriter. Then, they were hurled back into Conley's face. But, it was like water pourned onto a mill wheel. They revolved the same answers, the same way.

Negro's Story Unbroken.

"It was because, gentlemen, the negro was telling the truth. Truth is ironbound. Truth is unchangeable. Ingenuity that can be collected in this whole town—this state, the world. Throw them with their every skill at fact. They lost, and with the loss went the loss of their theory in whole.

"When that was finished they were forced to sit and leave Jim's truth unscathed. How unfortunate! All they could say was that Jim had been a big liar. Was it? Was that what its intended? Conley, the negro would have had to write these notes accusing a negro, and, just the point if they had forced Jim to have buried him at police headquarters, they could have muddled me even more.

"Suppose Frank's story was true. In this case is shown, as it has been. He is a smart man. There is no disputing that fact. He needn't have told you all the details he needed the amount of work he did that day. You can tell that he is smart, clever, ingenious.

"Now, Jim, who, according to that Saturday morning by order of the brilliant Frank, his boss. There's no denial of this so far. Other people at yeh factory have seen Conley enter the factory with men at suspicious hours. Jim tells you of watching the three folks. And there is this to reckon with.

"Providence has a way of revealing the truth at the final minute. At the seventh hour, the seventh day, the men yesterday who had been to the pencil factory at the noon Mary Phagan was murdered. They say Jim Conley did. Jim tells you, sitting on the first floor, near the door where he watched for Frank.

"Mrs. White saw him, although she doesn't identify him perfectly. On thing true, she saw a negro in the position Jim Conley was in.

"Now, for what purpose was he there?

The Time of the Tragedy.

"We have brought you to the time of the tragedy. Jim is still there. Everybody has gone, leaving him and Frank in the building. Frank knew that Mary Phagan was coming to get her pay, and knew the hour. On the previous afternoon little Helen Ferguson, Mary's friend, had come for her pay, only she was told to come back next day. Frank had told her that Mary would come and get her own pay, breaking a rule of the factory. He knew that arrangements with Jim to hang around and make himself convenient. Jim takes his accustomed seat in the hallway, where he can see and hear and observes all that happens, he says nothing. Finally Mary Phagan arrives, pretty, beautiful, innocent, fateful, in frock and new hat and a ribbon around her hair.

"Without any thought of evil, or foreboding of tragedy, she tripped in to the building and up the stairs, going for $1.20. No explanation can come from Mary. The dead girl has no stories to tell. She went in a little after 12. She found Frank. He tells us that much from his side. He says he was there for 12 o'clock. It's his own statement. What a statement!

"There was Mary. Then, there was another little girl, Monteen Stover. He never knew Monteen was there, and as said he stayed in his office from 12 until after 1 o'clock, when Monteen waited around for five minutes. Then she left.

"The result?

"There comes for the first time from the lips of Frank, the defendant, the admission that he might have gone to some other part of the building during this time—that he might have clearly

The Pursuing Footsteps.

"Jim Conley, sitting faithfully down-stairs, heard footsteps going toward the metal room. Then there came the sound of other footsteps, footsteps that pursued. There was no return of the first footsteps, and the footsteps that pursued tiptoed back from the metal room.

"Then Leo stamped a signal on the office floor.

"I will be fair with Frank. When he followed the child back into the metal room, he didn't know that it would necessitate force to accomplish his purpose. I don't believe he originally had murder in his heart."

There was a scream. Jim Conley heard it. Just for the sake of knowing how harrowing it was, I wish you jurymen could hear a similar scream. It was poorly described by the negro. He said it sounded as if a lamb was broken off into a shriek. He heard it break through the stillness of the hushed building. It was uncanny, but he sat faithfully on. He was under orders.

He was to come on signal. That scream was no signal. Later, Frank would stamp on the office floor.

"This negro tells you that the white man killed the little girl. But, not Frank was in his office, busy with his wonderful financial sheet. I will show you how he could have sat at his desk and heard this negro attack the little child who had come to draw her pay."

Turns to Diagram.

The speaker turned to the diagram, showing the jury the nearness of the metal room to Frank's office, explaining his theory that nothing could have happened on the floor without being heard or seen by Frank.

Mr. Frank, I will give you the benefit of all you deserve. When all is summed up, you were sitting only a few feet from the spot where a murder was committed, and you never raised a finger.

"Let me show you something else. When this thing was over there were two men and a woman upstairs who had to get out the building before the body was moved. It would be dangerous to leave it lying back in the metal room, stirring hideously from unseeing eyes.

"Frank went upstairs and told the trio up there that if they were going, it was time for them to leave, as he was going to close the factory. He was in a hurry and told them so. Mrs. Arthur White, perceiving his evident hurry, hastened downstairs. When she reached the office, Frank, the man-for-a-hurry, was in his shirt sleeves, writing at his desk.

"Why Should I Hang."

"Why should I hang?" What does that show? In the first place, his appreciation of a little girl of 14. Did it show that the rope of crime was around her neck, did it hurt him as he drew it tighter and tighter around the throat that the dim spark of life was choked extinct?

"To the contrary, it only excited him enough to ask himself the question:

"Why should I hang?"

"Then, come times when we all speak out our true thoughts and sentiment. That was such a time.

"Now, which is the more probable—that Jim Conley, Rosser could conceive. His answers were hurried from the stenographer's notes and transcribed on typewriter. Then, they were hurled into Jim Conley's face. But, it was like water pourned onto a mill wheel. They revolved the same answers, the same way.

Negro's Story Unbroken.

"It was because, gentlemen, the negro was telling the truth. Truth is ironbound. Truth is unchangeable. Ingenuity that can be collected in this whole town—this state, the world. Throw them with their every skill at fact. They lost, and with the loss went the loss of their theory in whole.

"When that was finished they were forced to sit and leave Jim's truth unscathed. How unfortunate! All they could say was that Jim had been a big liar. Was it? Was that what its intended? Conley, the negro would have had to write these notes accusing a negro, and, just the point if they had forced Jim to have buried him at police headquarters, they could have muddled me even more.

"Suppose Frank's story was true. In this case is shown, as it has been. He is a smart man. There is no disputing that fact. He needn't have told you all the details he needed the amount of work he did that day. You can tell that he is smart, clever, ingenious.

think that Gantt stole that paltry dollar.

"He expected him to ask where Mary Phagan was. That, gentlemen of the jury, is why he jumped back when he saw Gantt.

"But Gantt spoke to the defendant. He just said, 'Howdy, Mr. Frank.' The defendant felt relieved then.

"Gantt told him that he had left a pair of shoes in the factory and wanted to get them. But it won't do to let him go in that building now, thought the defendant. Suppose he should find out? He mustn't go in there. So the defendant said that he thought he had seen a nigger sweeping Gantt's shoes out of the building. When Gantt said he had two pairs of shoes in there and that maybe the other pair wasn't swept out.

"This was the last hope. What could he say to that? He had said that he saw the nigger sweeping out only one pair. In a few days this murder must be cast anyway. To keep Gantt out would arouse his suspicions. He would have to let him in this time. So, Gantt was let in at the door in the defendant's mind; 'I'll let him in, but I'll guard him like a thief.' And he said, 'Newt, go with him.'

"Straight to the last place Gantt found both pairs of shoes, just where he said he had left them.

"Gentlemen, does that look like the defendant was a nigger sweeping them out? Does that look like the truth?

Called Up Factory.

"After he had let Gantt in the factory, what did he do?

"He called up the factory by phone, a thing that he never had done before. Why? Why did he do that thing? Gantt! Gantt! That's why!

"He wanted to know if Gantt had gone and whether he was any the wiser. He couldn't rest until he knew this. This Banquo's ghost of a Gantt was haunting him.

"But when he knew that Gantt was safely gone and everything was all right, he was in a fine humor then. He could laugh and talk. He could sit down in the house with his wife and read from the newspaper. He could laugh and jest. He could break up a card game. He felt fine and relieved. As glad and free as a school boy.

"Old long-legged Gantt was gone, and everything was all right!

"Now, gentlemen, I suppose most of you are southern men, men who know the negro better than most of the negro. Will you please tell me if the idea that a negro would have had to write these notes accusing a negro, and, just the point if they had forced Jim to have buried him at police headquarters, they could have muddled me even more.

Arnold Ridicules Plot Alleged by Prosecution And Attacks the Methods Used by Detective

When Attorney Frank A. Hooper had made the opening speech of the prosecution, Attorney Reuben R. Arnold prepared for the first speech of the defense. It had been announced that he would review the entire history of the case and when he started at noon the courtroom of the pencil factory was brought in.

A large diagram giving a synopsis of the case was also brought in, but was not unwrapped when Mr. Arnold first started.

"Gentlemen of the jury, we are all to be congratulated that this case is drawing to a close," Mr. Arnold began in a quiet voice as though addressing several friends on an everyday subject.

"We have all suffered here from trying a long and complicated case at the heated term of the year. It's been a case that has taken so much effort and so much concentration and so much time, and the quarters here particularly hard on you members of the jury who are practically in custody while the case is going on.

"I know it's hard on a jury to be kept confined this way, but is necessary that they be segregated and set apart where they will get no impression at home nor on the street.

"The members of the jury are in a sense set apart on a mountain, where, far removed from the passion and heat of the plain, calmness rules them and they can judge a case on its merits.

Takes Rap at Hooper.

"My friend, Hooper, said a funny thing here a moment ago. I don't think he meant what he said, however," Mr. Arnold then stated. "Mr. Hooper said that the men in the jury box are no different from the men on the street.

"Your honor, I'm learning something every day. I've learned that, also, something today, if that's true," he added, turning to Judge Roan.

"Mr. Arnold evidently mistakes my meaning, which I thought I made clear," interrupted Attorney Frank Hooper. "I stated that the men in the jury box are like unto the men on the street in the fact that in making up their minds about the guilt or innocence of the accused they must use the same common sense that they would if they were not part of the court."

"Well, let's get away from that street idea, entirely," Mr. Arnold fired back.

The speaker then launched into a description of the horrible crime that had been committed that afternoon or night in the National Pencil company's metal basement. He dwelt on the effect of the crime upon the people of Atlanta and of how high feeling ran and still runs, and of the unanimous desire for punishment of the man who committed the crime.

Roasts Motorman Kenley.

"There are fellows like this street car man, Kenley, the one who vilified this defendant here at... cried for him to be lynched and shouted that he was a murderer a year ago. He exposed himself as a nuisance on the cars he ran.

"Why I can hardly realize that a man had been a motorman and a man with certain police powers and the discretion necessary to guide a car over the busy streets would give way to passion and prejudice like that.

"It was a type of man like Kenley who said that he was in favor of whether those negroes hanged in Decatur for the shooting of the street car men were fully guilty, and was glad they hung as some negroes ought to be hanged for the crime. He's the same sort of a man who believes that there ought to be a hanging because that innocent little girl was murdered, and who would like to see this jury here hang, because somebody ought to hang for it.

Frank's Only Guilt.

"I'll tell you right now, if Frank hadn't been a Jew he would never have been any prosecution against him. I'm asking my own people to turn him loose, asking you to turn him loose, a Jew, and I'm not a Jew, but I would rather die before doing injustice to a Jew.

"This case has just been built up by degrees; they have a monstrous perjurer here in the form of this Jim Conley and against him is the fact what sort of a man Conley is, and you know that up to the time the murder was committed no one ever heard a word against Frank.

"Villainy like this charged to him does not crop out in a day. There are long, murderous lines that go before. There are only a few who have ever said anything against Frank. I want to call your attention later to the testimony of these witnesses and the class of ours. A few floaters around the factory, out of the hundreds who have worked there in the plant there are four who have been induced to come up here and swear that Frank has not a good character, but not a single people who know there have sworn to his good character. Look at the jail birds they brought up here, the very dregs of humanity, men and women who have disgraced themselves and who now have come and tried to swear away the life of an innocent man.

To Strip Frank Bare.

"I know that you members of the jury are impartial. That's the only reason why you are here and I'm going to strip the state's case bare for you, if I have the strength to last to do it.

"They have got to show Frank guilty of one thing before you can convict him, they've got to show that he is guilty of the murder, no matter what else they know about him. You are trying him solely for the murder and there must be no chance that anyone else could just as likely be guilty.

"If the jury sees that there is just as good a chance that Conley can be guilty then they must turn Frank loose.

"Now you can see how in this case the detectives were put to it to blame the crime on somebody. First it was Lee and then it was Gantt and various people came in and declared they had seen the girl alive late Saturday all up. He is the man about whom it appeared that the whole fight would center. If he could convince you that Jim confessed the murder to him that would let Frank out!

"Yet where is Mincey?

"Gentlemen, this has been a long testimony which you have had to sit through, and I do not wish to take up any more of your time than necessary."

Placard Brought Into Court.

The jury retired from the room for a few minutes, and a large placard, about the size of an ordinary sign, was brought into the room by the defense, upon which were bulletinized the main points of the testimony.

When the jury came back, Hooper read to them the law upon the relevancy of character evidence and that defining reasonable doubt.

He explained to the jury that the only belief required of them was the same sort of belief that they would have upon the street, at their places of business or in their homes, and that on this belief they were to act. "Simply use your common sense in the jury box," said he. "I thank you."

Gantt and Mincey.

"Well, suspicion turned away from Gantt and in a little while it turned away from Lee. Now I don't believe that Newt is guilty of the crime, but I do believe that he knows a lot more than he has told. He knows all he knows about those letters and he found that body a lot sooner than he said he did.

"Oh, well, the whole case is a mystery, a deep mystery, but there is one thing pretty plain, and that is that whoever wrote those notes committed the crime. Those notes certainly had some connection with the murder, and whoever wrote those notes committed the crime.

"Well, they put Newt Lee through the third degree and the fourth degree and maybe a few others. That's the way you know they got this affidavit from the poor negro woman, Minola McKnight. Why, just the other day the solicitor general handed down a decision in which it referred to the third degree methods of the police and detectives in words that burned."

Here the speaker read the decision which attacked alleged third degree methods.

"Well, they used those methods with Jim Conley. My friend Hooper said nothing held Conley to the witness chair here but the truth, but I tell you that a rope around a man's neck held him there. I think this decision about the third degree was handed down with Conley's case in mind. I'm going to show that Jim Conley business up before I get through.

Charges "Frame-Up."

"I'm going to show that this entire case is the greatest frame-up in the history of the state."

Here court adjourned for lunch.

"My friend Hooper remarked something about circumstantial evidence and how powerful it frequently was. He forgot to say that the circumstances, in every case, must invariably be proved by witnesses.

"History contains a long record of circumstantial evidence and I once had a book on the subject which dwelt on such cases, most all of which were convictions and proved to them. Horrible mistakes have been made by circumstantial evidence—more so than by any other kind.

"Hooper Arnold cited the Durant case in San Francisco, the Hampton case in England, and the Dreyfus case in France as instances of mistakes made by circumstantial evidence. In the Dreyfus case he declared it was purely persecution of the Jew.

"But the point is, the murder itself was not as savage, he asserted, as the feeling to convict this man.

"But the brutality and venom is there, just the same, and it is a case very much on the order of Dreyfus.

Attack's Hooper's Position.

"Hooper says 'Suppose Frank didn't kill the girl and Conley did, wasn't it Frank's duty to protect her?' He was taking the position that if Jim Conley was there and knew of the crime he could not help but know about the murder. Which position, I think, is quite absurd.

Take this hypothesis, then, of Mr. H

that's what he testified here at the trial. My recollection is that one single drop of blood contains 3,000 corpuscles. And, he found these corpuscles on only one chip.

"I say that half of the blood had been on the floor two or three years. The stain on all chips but one were not blood. Dorsey's own doctors have put him where he can't wriggle—his own evidence hampers him.

"They found blood spots on a certain spot and then had Jim adapt his story accordingly. They had him put the finding of the body near the blood spots, and had him drop it right where the spots were found.

"It stands to reason that if a girl had been wounded on the lathing machine, there would have been blood in the vicinity of the machine. Yet, there was no blood in that place and neither was there any where the body was said to have been found by Conley. The case doesn't fit. It's flimsy.

"A Cheap, Common Plant."

"And, this masculine that they've raised such a rumpus over. It was put on the floor as a cheap, common plant to make it appear as though someone had put it there in an effort to hide the blood spots. The two spots of blood and the strands of hair are the only evidence that the prosecution has that the girl was killed on the second floor.

"Now, about these strands of hair. Barrett, the explorer, says he found four or five strands upon the lathing machine. I don't know whether he did or not. They've never been produced. I've never seen them. But, it's probable, for, just beyond the lathing machine, right in the path of a draft that blows in from the window, is a gas jet used by the girls in curling and primping their hair. It's very probable that strands of hair have been blown from this jet to the lathing machine.

"The state not only has got no case, gentlemen, but they've got the most slipshod, ill-fitting bill of it ever seen.

"The detectives say that Frank is a crafty, cunning criminal, who's deep down in their hearts they know and admit. They know well that their case is built against him purely because he was honest enough to admit his presence that day. Had he been a criminal, he never would have told about seeing her and would have replaced her even after he left, as nothing she had never called for her pay.

Defends Character of Women.

"I believe that a majority of the women are good. The state jumped on poor little Hollis, and that method, now, mind you, that sets is a paragon of virtue. But there are men who were put up by the state who are no better than she. In this instance, this Dalton, who says openly that he went into the basement with Daisy, I don't believe he ever laid hands in such a case, he slipped in. There are some fallen women who can tell the truth. They have characteristics like all other girls.

"We put her on the stand to prove Dalton a liar and we did it. Now, gentlemen, don't you see that the prosecution is hard-pressed when they put up such a character as Dalton. They say he has reformed. A man with the very in his soul never reforms. Drunkards do and men with bad habits, but thieves? No.

"I will not condemn a man like Frank on the word of a scamp like Dalton.

Now, I'm coming back to you Conley. The whole case revolves around him. Mr. Hooper stated well on that point. At one time in the case, the suspicion pointed to Frank merely because he was the only man in the building. Conley stayed out for two weeks that alcohol was on the first floor.

Takes Rap at Detectives.

"The detectives put their efforts on Frank because he was located, having been the only man in the building. They have let their real run away with them in this case, and it is true. They are proud when ever they get a prisoner who will tell some thing on anybody. The hotshot the victim the worse is the case. Such evidence comes with the stamp of untruth on its face.

"Jim Conley was telling his story to us in the cell. He was the speaker, we were happy listeners. If there is anything for which a negro is culable it is for telling a story in detail. It is the same with children. Both are vivid imaginations. And a negro is also the best mimic in the world. He can imitate anybody.

"Jim Conley, as he lay in his cell and read the papers and talked with the detectives, conjured up his wonderful story, and laid the crime on Frank, because the detectives had laid it there and were helping him do the same.

"Now Brother Hooper waves the bloody shirt in our face. It was found Sunday or Monday (Jones's).

"Why Detectives Black and Scott were giving cash to poor, old man Newt Lee. I don't doubt it for a minute that they know it was out there when they started out after it.

"I can't say they planted it, but it does look suspicious. Don't ask us about a planted shirt. Ask Scott and Black.

"The first thing that points to Conley's guilt is his original denial that he could write. Why did he deny it? Why should he suppose much was thought of it when Jim said he couldn't write, because there are plenty of negroes who are in the same fix. But Conley, when they found he could, and found that his script compared perfectly with the murder notes, they went right on and charged Frank. Not in criminal annals was there a better chance to lay at the door of another man a crime as we it was Jim Conley had.

"Now, there's reason to all things. The detective department had many reasons to push the case against Frank. He was a man of position and culture. They were afraid that someone, unless they pushed the case to the limit, would accuse them of trying to shield him. They are afraid of public and sentiment, and do not want to combat it. So, in such cases, they invariably follow the line of least resistance".

Conley's Statement Attacked.

Continuing the reading of Conley's statement, Arnold pointed out the use of words, which he declared no negro would naturally have used. These were long words with many syllables in them.

"They said that Conley used so much detail in his statements that he could not have been lying," exclaimed Arnold.

Arnold then read parts of statements, which he declared contradicted Conley on occasions and pointed out the wealth of detail with which they were filled.

"And yet they say he couldn't fabricate so much detail! Oh, he is smart!" cried Arnold.

He then took up the reading of the statement of May 24, in which Conley admitted writing the notes. In this he showed three different times at which Conley claimed he wrote the notes, these being early in the morning, at 12:01 and at 3 p.m.

"Now where Conley sought to show that the statements were not genuinely Conley's. "Take the word negro," he said. "The first word that a negro learns to spell correctly is negro, and he always takes particular pains to spell it n-e-g-r-o. He knows how to spell it. Listen to the statement. He says that Conley misspelled the word 'negros,' but that Frank did not want the 's' on it and told him to turn it out, which he did. Then he says that he wrote the word over 'em.'

Arnold then read rapidly the parts of the statement referring to smoking in the factory with Frank, when it was against the rules, taking the cigarette box with money in it, etc.

Conley's Lies About the Notes.

"Look at the notes," he said. "He was frightened, he says, and he had to tell a lie and put one somewhere else. Instead of instructing him to write them.

"The first statement about them was a blunt lie—a lie in its incipiency. He said that he wrote them Saturday. This was untrue and unreasonable, and he saw it. Frank could not have known anything of an intended murder on Friday, and why should you think he might take, and therefore he could not have made Conley write them on Friday.

"Also, gentlemen of the jury, I tell you these people had a great find when they got this admission from Conley that Frank could write naturally.

"If Conley had stayed over there in the Tower with Uncle Wheeler Mangum he would have told the truth from the beginning and he would have stayed, with Wheeler Mangum.

Says Dorsey Made Mistake.

"My good friend, Dorsey, is all right. like him. But he should not have walked hand in glove with the detectives. There's where he went wrong.

"My good old friend Charlie Hill would not have done that. He would have let the nigger stay in the jail with Uncle Wheeler.

I like Dorsey. He simply made a mistake by joining in the hunt, in becoming a part of the chase. The solicitor should be the friend of as fair as the judge himself. But he's young and lacks the experience. He will probably know better in the future.

"Dorsey said this: He went to the Judge and got the nigger moved from the jail to the police station.

"The Judge never said, 'Whatever you say is all right.'

"Now, I'm going to show you how John Black got the statement of Conley changed. I am going to give you a demonstration. I have learned some things in this case about getting evidence!

"They say that Frank cut Conley loose and he decided to tell the truth.

"Conley is a wretch with a long criminal record. Gentlemen, how can they expect what he says to be believed against the statement of Leo M. Frank?

Four Pages of Lies.

"They say Conley can't lie about detail. Here are four pages, all of which he himself admits are lies. They are about every saloon on Peters street, saloons they've been in, saloons they've drank, his buying beer and all the ways in which he spent a morning. There is detail enough, and he admits that they are lies.

"Now, in his third statement, that of May 28, he changes the time of writing the letters from Friday to Saturday. Here are two pakes of what he said, all of which he afterwards said were lies.

"He says that's the statement that he wrote the notes on Friday in order to divert suspicion from his being connected with the murder which happened on Saturday. He also says that this is his final and true statement. God only knows how many statements he will make. He said he made the statement voluntarily and truthfully without promise of reward, saying that he is telling the truth and the whole truth.

"He said in his statement that he never went to the factory building on Saturday. Yet we know that he was lurking in the building all the morning on the day of the murder. We know that he was there, for that is where Frank, in such cases, they invariably follow the line of least resistance".

Had Guilt on His Soul.

"I know why he wouldn't admit being in that building on Saturday. He had guilt on his soul. He knew that he want it to be known that he was here on Saturday. That's why!

"Why, they joined him down what could not have been lying," exclaimed Arnold.

Arnold then read parts of statements, which he declared contradicted each other on occasions and pointed out the wealth of detail with which they were filled.

Made Conley Change Story.

"With this knowledge of the building, he naturally had no trouble in his examinme after he had formed his story.

"The miserable wretch has Frank sitting him in the wardrobe when Monteen Stover came up the main corder, when it has been proved that she came there and left before Mary Phagan ever entered the building on that day.

"They saw where they were wrong in that statement, and they made Conley change it on the stand. They made him say, I thought it was 11 when them. They knew that that story wouldn't fit.

"Do you remember," continued Arnold, "How eagerly Conley took the papers from the girls at the factory. And on both occasions there were four or five days the papers were full of the fact that Frank's home was in Brooklyn, and that his relatives were reported wealthy. Conley didn't have to go far to get material for that statement he put in Frank's mouth.

"It so happened, though, that Frank really did not have rich relatives in Brooklyn. His mother testified that his father was in ill health, and had but moderate means, and that his sister worked in New York for her living.

"He read from Conley's statement about what Frank wanted with the notes, saying that Frank said he wanted to know from Conley in his statement lyn and show what a smart negro he was, so that he could recommend him to them for a job.

"Why the nigger hadn't even asked for a job," exclaimed Arnold. "And if he had, what recommendation would such notes as these give him. Conley, you for a moment imagine a man saying that he intended to send his mother any such notes as these?"

Here Arnold read the repulsive contents of one of the notes.

"Gentlemen, am I living or dreaming, that I have to argue such points as these? This is what you've got to do. You've got to swallow every word that Conley has said—feathers and all, and you've got to believe me or not. How are you going to pick out of such a pack of lies as these what you will believe and what you will not? Yet this is what the prosecution has based the case upon. If this falls, all falls.

"And do you remember about the watch, where Conley said that Frank asked him, 'Why do you want to buy a watch for your wife? My big, fat wife wanted me to buy her an automobile, but I wouldn't do it.'

"Do you believe that, gentlemen of the jury?

"I tell you that they have misreated this whole case in the way they have insinuated that she would not come to the tower to see Frank—had deserted him. When we know that she stayed away from the jail at Frank's own request, because he did not want to submit her to the humiliation of seeing him locked up and to the vulgar gaze of the morbid and to the cameras of the newspaper men. The most awful wrong has been done in the way this family has been mistreated". The way they invaded Frank's home and manipulated his servants.

Are Not Representative.

"I deny that the people who did this are representative of the 175,000 people of Fulton county". We are a fair people, we are civilized people. Such acts as these are not in our natures".

Arnold reached the end of the statement where Conley changed the time of the writing of the notes to Saturday.

"That is where he changed the time of the writing of the notes to Saturday, out denied knowledge of the murder.

"That, of course, did not satisfy these gentlemen and they went back to him, and got the story of Conley incrimination. So they had him to change the statement again.

"Let me read Scott's statement about how they got the statements from him."

Arnold read the detective's statement about how his associates and he had spent six hours at the time with Conley on occasions and used profanity and cursing to get a confession.

"Hooper thinks," continued Arnold, "that we have to break down Conley's alibi on the stand, but there is no such rule. You don't tell when to believe him, he has lied so much." Reading on, he came to the statement in which Hooper went over the testimony with Dorsey.

"There," said Arnold, "is where my friend got into it."

Changed the Day.

Continuing his reading to show how the detectives got Conley to change the time from Friday to Saturday they went grilling Conley for six hours trying to impress on him the fact that Frank could not have written the notes on Friday.

"They wanted another statement," he said. "He insisted that he had no other statement to make, but he did change the time of the writing of the notes from Friday to Saturday. This is clear, gentlemen, as clearly as anything can show how they got Conley's statements.

Lawyers Are Accessories.

"In the statement of May 29 they had nothing for Conley about his knowledge of the killing of the little girl," Mr. Arnold continued, "and the negro supposed that Frank had told him something about the girl having received a fall and about his helping Frank to hide the body.

"Lawyers say, 'If a negro is on person guilty, yet defend him, are guilty of being accessories after the fact.

"Now, we are going to have you tell enough to put Conley before Frank and yet keep yourself clear.'

"That's a smart negro, that Conley. Why, when they got through cross-examining him because he stood up under the cross-examination of Colonel Rosser, well that negro's been well versed in law. Hooper and Black and Scantes drilled him, they gave him the blood hints.

"Conley says, 'We told him what would do.'

In his first statement Conley leaves himself out an accessory after the fact.

"Jim Conley's smart enough all right.

"We ain't hard to show how perjury comes into this case; the tracks are broad and clear.

"We came here to go to trial and know nothing of the negros claim to seeing Frank around the little girl's desk, or of his claim of seeing Lemmie Quinn go into the factory, or of a scrub bucket.

"Yet, Conley came there telling the truth, he said, and had thrown Frank aside, and he was no longer shield-ing Frank, but telling all he knew. All when he said he was telling the whole truth.

"Well, Conley had a revelation, you know.

"My friend Dorsey visited with him seven times.

Conley Saw New Light.

"And new friend Jim Starnes and my friend Arnold Peters have simply visited him, and on each visit Conley saw new light. Well, I guess they showed him things and other things.

"Does Jim tell a thing because it's the truth, gentlemen of the jury, or because it fits into something that another witness has told?

"Scott says, 'They told him things that fitted.'

"And Conley says they changed things every time he had a visit from Dorsey and the detectives. Are you going to hang a man on that?

"Gentlemen, it's foolish for me to have to argue such a thing.

"The man that wrote those murder notes is the man who killed that little girl," Attorney Arnold suddenly in a quiet voice.

"Prove that man was there and that he wrote the notes and you know who killed the girl. Well, Conley acknowledges he wrote the notes and witnesses have proved he was there and he admits that, too.

"Having turned suspicion towards the negro the attorney launched into a description of the way in which Conley might have done the murder.

"That negro was in the building near the elevator shaft, it took but two steps for him to grab that little girl's mesh bag. She probably held on to it and struggled with him.

"A moment later he had struck her in the eye and she had fallen. He struck her a moment for Conley to throw her down the elevator shaft.

Would Story Stand Pressure.

"Isn't it more probable that the story I have outlined is true than the one that Conley tells on Frank? Suppose Conley were now under indictment and Frank out, how long would such a story against Frank stand the pressure?

Here Mr. Arnold read from Conley's evidence on cross-examination, where he declared that he collected a bucket he had visited him seven times and that he had added something new each time.

"Mr. Rosser asked Jim on cross-examination why he had not told all the first time that Dorsey went there and the negro said he didn't want to; that he wanted to save some of it back. Who corrected the negro? Did Dorsey or Starnes or Campbell?

"Now, see here," added Mr. Arnold, "in the statement of May 29 there are any number of things that are not told of which later were told on the stand.

"In the May 29 statement Conley never told of seeing Mary Phagan enter; he never told of seeing Monteen Stover enter, nor of seeing Lemmie Quinn enter; now he tells of having seen all of them enter.

"Don't you see how they just fitted to fit witnesses and what the witnesses would say?

"It was, 'Here, Conley, swear that Quinn came up, swear that the dead girl came up, and swear that Miss Stover came up; they all did and it's true, swear to it!'

"And Conley would say, 'All right, boss, ah reckon they did.'

"And it was, 'Conley, how did you fail to hear that girl go into the factory?' 'Why, boss, I was away there, because by our blood and hair we have proved she was killed there,' and the poor negro thought a minute and then he said, 'Yes, boss, I heard her go in.'"

Made Conley Swear.

Attorney Arnold went through the same method and in the same way declared that the state's representatives had put it into the negro's head to swear that Frank got in with her and that he heard Frank come tiptoeing out later and that by that method they made Conley swear that Frank was a pervert.

"Now, I don't know that they told Conley to swear to this and to swear to that, but they made suggestions and Conley knew whom he had to please. He knew that when he pleased the detectives that the rope kept around his neck grew looser.

"In the same way they made Conley swear about Dalton, and in the same way about Daisy Hopkins. They didn't ask him about the mesh bag. They forgot that until Conley got on the stand. That mesh bag and that boy stood between Frank and freedom for this crime, too, and if the girl was ravished, Conley did it after he had robbed her and thrown her body into the basement.

"Well, they got Conley on the stand and my friend Dorsey here asked Conley about the mesh bag and Conley said yes, Frank had put it in his safe. That was the crowning lie of all!

"Well, they've gone on this way, adding one thing about to another thing. They wouldn't let Conley out of jail; they had their own reasons for that and you've seen how they've worked over there (pointing to the sheriff) called dishonest. He runs his jail in a way to protect the innocent and not to convict the guilty.

"Now, they've got Conley right where they want him. He's a state witness. He's got to tell the truth, he's got to stick to his story. He's got to tell it or he will be convicted himself.

Talks of the Murder.

Mr. Arnold then switched away from that and talked of the murder.

"Gentlemen, little Mary Phagan was murdered (pointing to the pasteboard model of the National Pencil factory, which has been used in the court when he started to speak), and it's a terrible crime."

Mr. Arnold then went on to describe in detail the horror of the Phagan tragedy, the crime that stirred Atlanta as none other ever did.

"We have come into court the man who wrote those notes and the man who by his own confession was there; the man who killed her, and gentlemen, why go further in seeking the murderer than the black brute who sat there by the elevator shaft?

"The man who sat by the elevator shaft is the man who committed the crime. He was full of passion and lust, he had designs of some kind on her and wanted money at first to buy more whiskey.

Mr. Arnold then asked the sheriff to unwrap a chart which had previously been brought into court. It proved to be a chronological chart of Conley's alleged movements on Saturday, April 26, the day of the crime, and Mr. Arnold announced to the jury that he would prove by the chart that it was a physical impossibility for Frank to have committed the crime.

"Every word that chart is taken from the evidence," stated the pleading attorney, "and it will show you that Frank could have had time to commit the crime charged to him.

The state has wriggled a lot in this affair, they put up little Gerge Epps on his own statement, and then they got to town about seven after twelve and then they used other witnesses. Epps says he got to town at 7:30, but the Epps boy's evidence aside as though it were nothing.

"Epps took a street car men, Hollis and Mathews say that Mary Phagan got to Forsyth and Marietta at five or six minutes after twelve, and they think it was twelve, because of the bulldoze them, and then Mathews, who rode on the car to Whitehall and Alabama, says that Mary Phagan came around with him to Broad and Hunter streets before she got off.

McCoy Had No Watch.

"Well, the state puts McCoy, the man who never got his watch out of soak until about the time he was called as a witness, and they had him swear that he looked at his watch on Walton and Forsyth and he never had any watch, and it was 12 o'clock exactly and that Mary Phagan left the street and saw Mary Phagan on her way to the factory.

"Now, I don't believe McCoy ever saw Mary Phagan. Epps may have seen her but the state apparently calls him to the stand when they introduce other testimony to show a change of time to what he swore to. It's certain those two street car men who knew the girl, saw her, but they didn't come in with the watchless McCoy and Kenley, the Jew-hater, and try to advance new theories about time and different ones from what their own witness had sworn to.

"Well, we have enough to prove the time, all right, we have the factory schedule, the statement of Hollis and Mathews and of George Epps, the state's own witness.

"The next thing is how long did it take Conley to go through with what he claims Frank did from the time he went into Frank's office and was told to get the body until he left the factory?

"According to Conley's own statement he started at four minutes to 1 o'clock and got through at 1:30 o'clock, making 34 minutes.

"Harlee Branch there the speaker paid a tribute to the newspaper man mentioned) says that he was there when the detectives made Conley go through with what he claimed took place and that he started then at 12:17 and by Mr. Branch's figures it took Conley 50 minutes to complete the motions.

Didn't Attack Dr. Owen.

"Well, the state has attacked nearly everybody we have brought into this case, but they didn't attack Dr. William Owen, and he showed by his experiments that Conley could not have gone through those motions in 34 minutes."

Mr. Arnold then read from Jim Conley's evidence on cross-examination where he declared that he started at 4 minutes to 1 o'clock to get the body and that he and Frank left at 1:30.

"If we ever pinned the negro down to anything we did to that, and we have shown that he could not have done all that in 34 minutes.

"Leaving out the slander and filth hurled at Frank and the statements of those poor little factory girls, dragged up here and made to swear that his character was bad, there can be no truth in the state's case."

Mr. Arnold then read the chronological chart through to the jury, stopping from time to time to comment on it. He paused at where the chart stated that Miss Hattie Hall left the office at 12:02 o'clock and went on to show from her evidence how that had been settled upon. Then he declared that the little Stover girl had entered the office and left before Mary Phagan did.

"Away with your filth and your dirty, shameful evidence of perversion; let's see straight and come back to the time—the time-element in the case," Mr. Arnold almost shouted.

"Now, I don't believe that little Stover girl ever went into the inner office; she was a sweet innocent, timid little girl, and she just peeped into the office from the outer one, and if Frank was in there, the safe door hid him from her view, or if he was not there, he might have stepped out for just a moment.

"Oh, my friend, Dorsey," Mr. Arnold again launched into an attack on his brother attorney's methods. "He stops clocks and he changes schedules, and then changes a man's whole physical make-up, and by a minor change the course of time in an effort to get Frank convicted.

Charges Rotten Evidence.

"Oh, I hate to think of little Mary Phagan in this. I hate to think that such a sweets pure, good little girl is the was, with never a breath of anything wrong being against her, should have her memory polluted with such rotten evidence against an innocent man.

"Well, Mary Phagan entered the factory at approximately 12 minutes after 12," Mr. Arnold continued in a quieter tone, "and did not stop to think that it was Frank who told them that the girl entered the office and killed her she entered, and if Frank killed her he would have just slipped her pay envelope back in the safe and declared that he found it there or that he had not at all, and then no one could have ever explained how she got into that basement.

"But Frank couldn't know that there was hatred enough left in this country against his race to bring such a hideous charge against him.

"Well, the little girl entered, and she got her pay and asked about the mesh bag and she left, but there was a black spider web over there near the elevator shaft, a great pasty animate, lustful animal, full of mean whisky and vile lust, and the mesh bag which to buy more whisky. He was as full of vile lust as he was of the passion of drink, and the negro said there are a thousand of them in Atlanta who would assault a white woman if they had the chance and knew they wouldn't get caught) robbed her and struck her and threw her body down the shaft and later he carried it back, thinking that she was alive, when he came back he committed a worse crime, and then he put the cord around her neck and left the body there.

"Do you suppose Frank would have gone out at 1:30 o'clock and left that body in the basement and those two white men, White and Denham, at work upstairs." Do you suppose an intelligent man like Frank would have risked running that elevator, like Conley says he did, with the rest of the machinery in the factory shut off and nothing to prevent those men up there hearing him?

Girl Saw Frank.

"Well, Frank says he left the factory at 1:15 and Conley says he left there at 1:30. Now, there's a little girl, who tried the week before to get a job as stenographer in Frank's office, who was standing at Whitehall and Alabama streets and saw Frank at ten minutes after 1.

"Did that little girl perjure herself try to show it, and according to Dorsey everybody lied except Conley and Dalton and Albert McKnight.

"This little girl knew Frank who knew it was Frank because Professor Brisco had introduced her to him the week before and she knows the time of day because she had looked at a clock as she had an engagement to meet her little girl.

"That story of Conley's about Frank the blacker than hell!

Then Mrs. Levy, she's a Jew, but she's telling the truth; she was looking for her son to come home and she saw Frank get off the car at his home corner and she looked at her clock and it was 1:20. Then Mrs. Selig and Mr. Selig swore on the stand that they knew he came in at 1:20.

"Oh, of course, Dorsey says they are Frank's parents and wretched liars when they say they saw him come in at 1:20.

"There's no one in this case that can tell the truth," shouted the attorney in a sarcastic tone, "but Conley. Dalton, Albert McKnight. They are the lowest dregs and filth birds and all that, but they are the only ones who know how to tell the truth!

"Well, now Albert says he was there at the Selig home when Frank came in, of course he is a liar, for his wife and the Seligs prove that, but here's the state's witness and he says Frank got there at 1:30 and thus he brands Conley's and Frank's leaving the factory at 1:30 as a lie.

Saw Frank's Reflection.

"Well, along the same lines Albert says Frank didn't eat and that he was nervous and Albert says he learned all this by looking into a mirror in the dining room and seeing Frank's reflection.

Then Albert caps the climax fo his series of lies by having Frank board the car for town at Pulliam street and Glenn."

Mr. Arnold then dwelt on the claim of the defense that the affidavit signed by Minola McKnight, the cook for Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, was obtained by "third degree" methods.

"How would you feel, gentlemen of the jury," he asked, "if your cook, who had done no wrong and for whom no warrant had been issued, and from whom the solicitor had already got a statement, was to be locked up.

"Well, they got that wretched husband of Minola's by means of Craven and Pickett, two men seeking a reward, and then they got Minola, and they said to her, 'Oh, Minola, why don't you tell the truth like Albert's telling it'

"They had no warrant when they locked this woman up. Starnes was guilty of a crime when he locked that *woman up without a warrant, and Dor*sey was, too, if he had anything to do with it.

"Now George Gordon, Minola's lawyer, says that he objected to Dorsey about getting the woman out, and Dorsey replied, 'I'm afraid to give my consent to turning her loose. I might get in bad with the detective department.'

*"That's the way you men got evi*dence, was it?" he shouted, pointing to a group of city detectives who stood at the table with the state's lawyers."

Then Mr. Arnold changed his subject. He took up the accusations made against certain witnesses and delivered a eulogy upon Miss Rebecca Carson, a forewoman in the National Pencil *factory, who, when called by the de*fense, swore Frank had a good character. The state had introduced witnesses who swore that the woman and Frank had gone into the woman's dressing room when no one was around. Mr. Arnold branded it a culmination of all lies when this woman was attacked. He said Frank had been accused to be a perfect lady with no shadow of suspicion against her.

Made Out Financial Sheet.

"Well, Frank went on back to the factory that afternoon when he had eaten his lunch and he started in and made out the financial sheet. I don't reckon he could have done that if he had just committed a murder, particularly when the state says he was so nervous the next morning that he shook as a tremblad.

"Then the state says Frank wouldn't look at the corpse. But who said he didn't? Nobody. Why, Gheesling and Black didn't swear to that.

"Now, gentlemen," continued the speaker, "I've about finished this chapter, and I know it's been long and hard on you and I know it's been hard on me, too; I'm almost broken down, but it means a lot to that man over there (pointing to Frank). It means a lot to him, and don't forget that.

"This case has been made up of just two things—prejudice and perjury," Mr. Arnold continued, "the never seen such malice, such personal hatred in all my life and I don't think anyone ever has.

"The crime itself is dreadful, too horrible to talk about, and God grant that the murderer may be found out, and I think he has. I think we can point to Jim Conley and say there is the man.

But, above all, gentlemen, let's follow the law in this matter. In these circumstantial cases you can't convict a man as long as there's any other possible theory for the crime of which he is accused, and you can't find Frank guilty if there's a chance that Conley is the murderer.

"The state has nothing on which to base their case but Conley, and we've shown Conley a lie. Write your verdict of not guilty and your consciences will give your approval."

Court then adjourned until 9 o'clock Friday morning.

END VICE AT ONCE URGES CHIEF BEAVERS

Chief Beavers received a letter Wednesday from Mrs. Randall, Hunt, president of the co-operative protective society, of Shreveport, La., asking for information in regard to the handling of the vice question in Atlanta. The citizens of Shreveport have been aroused by the rapid growth of the social evil in their city, and are determined to take definite action at once.

The Shreveport society asked Chief Beavers whether it were better to put an end immediately to the operation of houses in the restricted district or to reduce them gradually until they are abolished. Chief Beavers stated to Mrs. Hunt in his reply that the people of Atlanta are highly pleased with the summary way the police authorities of Atlanta have adopted in handling the question, and strongly advises the Louisiana city to "abolish it entirely and without temporizing for one day."

MAYOR ASKS PROBE OF NEW CREMATORY

Mayor James G. Woodward declared yesterday that he is anxious for the city to make a test of the new crematory, and declared that he will ask that the test be made within the next fifteen days. Reports around the city hall yesterday were to the effect that the plant was not doing exactly all that the contractors guaranteed.

The aldermanic committee will meet today to pass on a resolution offered by Councilman Claude L. Ashley, asking for an appropriation of $1,000 to pay for the employment of an expert engineer to represent the city at the evaporation test to be made at the plant, Week before last. It is expected that he will do with the resolution when it reaches him for approval, butit is expected that he will not do so, because he has declared his intention of seeing to it that the plant is equal to the guarantees made by the New York Destructor company.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

The present state of relations between the United States and Mexico is not unprecedented, as the uninformed alarmist would make believe.

The Maximilian government was never recognized by the United States, and throughout the period of French intervention the Juarez government continued to be recognized. In 1876, when Porfirio Diaz became provisional president of the Mexican republic, it was left to the discretion of the American minister as to whether or not the Diaz government should be recognized.

Up to that time it had been the custom of the United States to recognize the existing administration in Mexico in this manner, without closely scrutinizing the methods employed to get into power. But, at the time when Diaz seemed to have become the ruler of Mexico, there were unsettled controversies between the United States and Mexico concerning the Rio Grande frontier.

The American minister decided to "wait before recognizing General Diaz as president until it shall be assured that his election is approved by the Mexican people, and that his administration is possessed of the stability to endure and the disposition to comply with the rules of international comity and the obligations of treaties."

This President Hayes did, deferring the recognition more than a year, although all the powers then represented in Mexico, except the United States, Germany, Spain, Italy, Salvador and Guatemala, had previously officially recognized the Diaz government. The temporary interruption of official relations, at that time, worked no hardship on the American citizens in Mexico. Here precedent breaks down, probably because of the difference between the two men, Diaz and Huerta; the difference then and now in conditions in the two countries.

Since there is precedent in the temporary refusal of the United States to recognize a Mexican government, let us patiently hope that history will also repeat itself in a proper and mutually agreeable adjustment of the present strained relations between neighbors that should be neighborly on terms that are reasonable, reciprocal and equitable.

BASEBALL SLANG.

The newspapers of Chicago have recently taken a vote on baseball slang. The question was: Shall newspaper stories of baseball games be written in slang, or in straightforward English?

The vote stands in favor of dictionary English. It is reported that numerous college professors and other educators voted for a continuation of slang, while a majority of baseball players and managers expressed a preference for pure English. This goes to show that the baseball players and managers have more sense about language than those college professors and other educators have about either baseball or language.

This does not appear to be a war on slang. In our polite speech of today there are numerous words and expressions that were formerly regarded as slang. They have survived because they are fit. "Cut that out," and "It's up to you," probably express more than they would in elegant polysyllabic form. Slang that is useless and unworthy will not live. Slang that is worth while and that is needed is bound to survive.

It is in the interest of baseball that this printed use of slang is being called into question. Such terms as "fumbled," "singled," "swatted the sphere," and "jammed the cushions" may be figured out, but how is a man who speaks only English to understand what is meant by "clattered across the pan," "dented the platter," "got pinked in the slats," and "a clean bingle?"

Baseball exerts a wonderful influence upon boys everywhere. There are thousands of well-bred schoolboys in Georgia today who would rather be Tyrus Raymond Cobb than Thomas Woodrow Wilson. It is no wonder, then, that the majority of baseball players and managers want to remove from the national game cheap, foolish and obscure words and expressions.

RURAL CREDITS.

President Wilson cannot be accused of procrastination. Since assuming office he has taken active hold of too many difficult problems for the charge of evasion to be lodged against him.

Therefore when the president urges upon the house democratic caucus that consideration of rural credits should not conflict with tariff revision he has undoubtedly good reasons to support his argument.

The experience of all countries which have made special provision in their economic system for rural credits shows that different problems are involved in this and in so-called commercial or industrial credits.

With this fact in mind, the president says:

"special machinery and a distinct system of banking must be provided for if rural credits are to be successfully and adequately supplied.

"A government commission is now studying the interesting and highly successful methods which have been employed in several countries of the old world, and its report will be made to congress at a regular session next winter. It is confidently to be expected that the congress will at that session act upon the recommendations of that report and establish a complete and adequate system of rural credits.

"There is no subject more important to the welfare or the industrial development of the United States, there is no reform in which I would myself feel it a greater honor or privilege to take part, because I should feel that it was a service to the whole country of the first magnitude and significance."

The argument advanced is sound, and the plea both frank and well supported. Congress should finish one thing at a time and then turn its undivided attention to the peculiar needs of the farmer, who has too long been neglected.

Whatever can be done to enable him to finance his crop and to become independent through the use of the bases for credits he enjoys should be done as soon as the pressing question of general currency revision is settled.

HEALTHY MAN BEST MORALLY.

Sound health, which is more to be desired than riches, though youth scouts the axiom and young maturity views it lightly, is said by the health commissioner of Virginia to be best for men both here and hereafter.

Calling on the churches to help men be physically sound as a step toward moral soundness, Dr. E. W. Williams, in a bulletin just issued by the United States Bureau of Education, says:

"Public health asks the church to join hands with it in giving men better bodies, and it promises that when men's bodies shall be stronger their spirits will be nobler. It asks the church to assist it in making sanitary the community to which the church ministers, and it pledges the experience of the world that when that is done, none will benefit more than the church. Other things being equal, the healthy man is the moral man, and the sanitary community is the spiritual community."

While sermons on the dignity and beauty of a clean, sound, wholesome body are proper and desirable from the pulpit and will advance the cause of virtue, Dr. Williams is guilty of a pardonable exaggeration, since it is a fact that the contrary of his proposition is also true.

Many of the noblest spirits to bless the world and fill it with good works have been encased in a frail physique, and have overcome physical defects and physical weakness to become leaders of thought and of spiritual uplift. It is also true that many offenders against human and divine laws have been superb physical specimens.

Generally speaking, however, Dr. Williams is right in his contention that sound, well-ordered, well-disciplined bodies make for morality.

School and pulpit should teach the moral value of good health; the value of personal sanitation and sanitary communities. Both should be models of this teaching, clean, well-kept, well-ventilated.

Some folks demand all kinds of "fixings" for runnin' the country, but give us a table, a pine box, a pair o' scissors and a ream o' blank paper and we can run it in the ground as well as the best of 'em. One notice in a newspaper has made the reputation of a legislator who otherwise might have been a useful member of society; and congressmen, at home for a vacation, have bowed low to us after reading a paragraph wherein we stated that they were "resting from their labors," having nigh talked themselves to death in the interests of their salaries and their constituents. The longer we live the more we feel our importance. We are like a city set on a hill, and if an earthquake were to shake the ground from under us it is the common belief that we'd fall into a gold mine, elect ourself president and treasurer, and sit into a nice federal prison by selling shares to the credulous.

JUDGE JOHN A. COBB ON THE NEGRO PROBLEM

By Martin V. Calvin.

At the annual convention of the Georgia State Agricultural Society recently held at Cuthbert, Judge John A. Cobb, of Sumter, son of Howell Cobb, read a very interesting paper on "The Negro Problem."

The arguments advanced were forcefully presented, and made a deep impression on the convention.

Judge Cobb manifested independence of thought as became one who, from lifetime association with the negroes, is perfectly familiar with their character, and cherishes for the race a kindly feeling. He discussed the negro as an inferior race, intended by the Creator to be a "hewer of wood and drawer of water." He argued that, in all our relations with the negro, we should make him understand and recognize the fact that this is a white man's country; that his presence here was brought about by agencies for which we are in nowise responsible, but, so long as he properly conducts himself, we will guarantee to him the rights to which he is justly entitled.

Dependent as we are on agriculture for support, maintenance and prosperity, we require reliable labor in order to win success. The negro is here—known to us, and we are known to him. For our purposes, he is the best available laborer.

"Are we pursuing a proper course to keep this labor satisfied and to make it efficient and reliable?"

Judge Cobb argued that, in meeting the situation presented by the question propounded, a heavier responsibility rests upon us than on the negro. He is to us "as clay in the hands of the potter." It is our duty to so shape his course that he will prove to be a reliable laborer.

Judge Cobb declared that we are cognizant of the fact that naturally the negro is not malicious or revengeful, but he is easily influenced. He has no conception of gratitude. It follows that in cases in which the white man is seeking protection the negro from injustice at the hands of a white man, the negro is prone to think that such action justifies him in being impertinent and offensive to white people generally.

"I have frequently," said the judge, "had to tell them that when a white man does you a favor or protects you against injustice, he is forced to knock you down in order to make you know your proper place."

Judge Cobb suggested that this is one of the most serious things that confronts us in trying to protect the weak against those who would like to treat him unjustly. He regretted that there are some of our own people who, knowing that particular characteristic of the negro, are willing to take advantage of it because they also know the embarrassing position in which we are placed when called upon to protect the negro.

Judge Cobb said that the man who would solve this problem and thus restore the confidence of the negro in our people, and at the same time make the negro a law abiding and a wrong construction on our kindly motive, would be proclaimed a benefactor of both races.

As a slave, the negro was religiously cared for in every particular, and was taught the all-important lesson of implicit obedience.

What this was quite undone during carpet-bag days. Following in that damaging wake was the act of enfranchisement.

"It is any wonder," queried Judge Cobb, "that the suddenly freed and enfranchised slave should have had his mind warped and that he should have lost confidence in his real friends?"

Judge Cobb said it was impossible that any people under the sun could have taken the negro and made of him what we have made. Education, beyond the three r's, had almost invariably had the effect of rendering the negro valueless as a laborer, in a majority of instances, it had made him a burden to the community in which he lives.

Judge Cobb declared that frequently, in the competition that is in evidence among our people for labor, that the negro has been taught, wittingly or unwittingly, to disregard contracts and obligations of every character.

"This year," said Judge Cobb, "it has been demonstrated that this evil can be cured. The stringency of the money market prevented farmers from advancing money as freely as has been the custom, therefore the negroes' demands had to be denied. See the result! We are this year making the cheapest crop we have made in years, and our labor has been satisfactory. Necessity forced the condition. We met it with a firm and united stand."

"Whiskey, gambling and license to do evil are running rampant in this land," said Judge Cobb. "If you judge of who are the guilty ones by the convictions in our courts you would think that the negro is the only violator of the law."

Judge Cobb contended that the law-abiding citizens of the communities are largely responsible for the unfortunate condition of affairs of which mention has been made.

A change for the better, the speedy and genuine reform that is demanded by our highest and best interests, will not come until a united, a determined and an unyielding effort is put forth by the law-abiding elements of our own people. It rests with us whether or not Georgia shall continue to be recognized as "the Empire State of the South." In order to the preservation of that well-won title we must carry out, in our fullest meaning and its highest significance, the motto of our state—"wisdom, justice and moderation."

A Downland Village.

(Arthur L. Salmon, in The Pall Mall Gazette)

Browsing the village lies, waiting the cool
That cometh by and by—
Only a lazy murmur from the school,
And from the meadows sigh
A low refrain throughout these brooding hours
Of hot bees buried in the tangled flowers.

Sometimes a low of cattle, or the coo
Of pigeons half asleep,
And one long dropping lark-song from the blue
Above the haunts of sheep—
Above the sweeping downland and the fold,
The mounds of nameless dead, the farm-lands old.

No life stirs on the highway; stillness broods
And heat with shimmering haze;
The near is one with the far solitudes
Of deep embosomed ways.
One slumber wraps the streamlet trickling slow
And the great hillsides where the shepherds go.

Crocodiles as Policemen.

(London Correspondence to New York Sun.)

There have been instances in Papua in which long-sentence prisoners have had no desire to return to their homes because they grew fat in jail. However, these cases are exceptional, and attempts to escape are not infrequent. Crocodiles were a great danger to the runaway, an dthere was a belief in a part of the Papuan self that the crocodiled were in league with the government.

A prisoner escaping from jail was once severely lacerated by one of these reptiles while crossing a river. The criminal crawled to the nearest village constable and gave himself up to justice. "No good me flee; along government now; alligator he help government," was the complaint of the escapee.

The World's Mysteries

WHO WROTE FIRST "SHERLOCK HOLMES" STORIES?

The "Sherlock Holmes" stories present a master-work in the writing of this sort of fiction and they may be looked upon as starting an interest in literature of this character. Previous to their appearance the detective story was only of rare occurrence, but since then writers of all character have tried to follow them, sometimes with success, but more often with failure.

But the deduction so necessary in the successful detective story is not of recent invention. Some years ago Brander Matthews, in a lecture on Edgar Allan Poe, said that so far as he knew Voltaire's story of "Zadig" was the original detective story. A student of Columbia university was present at this lecture, and he forthwith set himself to work to find how near Mr. Matthews was correct in his assumption.

This student, Fraser by name, found that Voltaire was not the first to adapt the story that he tells in "Zadig," but he found the same thing in Chevalier de Mailly's "Voyage et Adventures des Trois Princes de Sarendip," which was printed as early as 1719, twenty-eight years before the Voltaire novel was written. In this French story he found the experiences who met a camel driver bewailing the loss of one of his herd. This is the way Fraser tells the story:

"Three travelers, who, on their returns and accuses them of bantering with him. 'To prove that what we say is true,' said the eldest, 'your camel carried butter on one side and honey on the other,' said the second. 'And a lady rode the camel, etc.'

In this case, too, somebody turns up with the beast and an explanation is demanded, just as in the Voltaire story. The three priests judged that the camel was blind because the grass on one side of the road was gnawed down, while that on the other side, which was far better, was not touched. It wasn't hard to deduce that the camel had but one eye. Mouthfuls of half-chewed herbage found in the road told the second prince that the camel had one tooth missing.

But even De Mailly was not the original, for it was found that this tale was directly transcribed from another unknown Italian writer, Christiforo Armeno. His "Peregrinationes," of which but three copies are extant, was printed at Venice in 1557, with the papal permit dated 1555.

De Mailly said upon his title page that the story was translated from the Persian and the same source is credited by Armeno. The story of the lost camel is but one of several stories in the book written by the Venetian. The same story has been found in Arabian, Persian, Turkish and Hebrew literature, in fact, the first apparent source is the tract Synhedrin of the Babylonian Talmud.

The Hebrew version has to do with a dialogue between two Hebrew prisoners. One says, as they are being taken along a road: "The camel that is ahead of us is blind; he carries two leather bottles, one containing wine and the other containing oil. Of his two conductors, one is a Hebrew, the other a pagan. 'How do you know that?' asks the master. 'He is blind because he grazes on one side of the road only,' is the answer. 'Parallel to his tracks are little bubbles on the surface of the earth—oil, and another liquid that has sunk into the ground—wine.'

The same story, with the substitution of salt and honey for oil and wine, has been found in no less than eleven Oriental tales. It is thought to be of Sanskrit derivation. The investigator even found an excuse for Voltaire's changing of a camel to a horse in a collection of Hebrew stories which were written in 1600. In one story three brothers encounter a Hebrew who has lost his horse and they tell him the color of the horse and the fact that he was blind and that he carried a flask of oil and a flask of wine.

There are other writers who claim to have found the first detective story in Chinese literature, but whatever the origin the formula for reasoning has become pretty well established and it is only in the degrees of horror, in the completeness of character drawing and in the settings, commonplace or extraordinary, that the skill of the writer has an opportunity for individuality. The detective story is no doubt as early as is story writing.

SCRANTON, PA.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.)

Scranton, Pa., is a well-known city situated among the smaller wrinkles of the face of Nature in Pennsylvania. The Lackawanna river flows through the city and the Lackawanna railroad flows to and from it to New York a short and easy performance. Scranton is noted for its two great productions—hard coal and correspondence. Each day of the year Scranton sends forth a thousand cars of hard coal out from the mines around the city, and each day it sends out several tons of correspondence to the Ambitious young people of America who are learning engineering, French, stenography, swimming, politics and landscape gardening by mail.

Before Scranton got into the correspondence game its coal production was tremendous, but its existence was not generally suspected. Now it is known all over the world and writing to Scranton is a favorite occupation. It pays to advertise.

Scranton has an area of 29 square miles and is built on a foundation of solid anthracite coal. All over the city thousands of men are working in the mines digging out this foundation, in consequence of which Scranton has many tidy, substantial homes. The earth occasionally faints away beneath the citizen's humble cottage in a disagreeable manner. Scranton is no better than other cities in summer, but is a paradise in winter owing to the extreme handiness of the coal supply and the happy citizen can buy as much heat at meter rates as easily as he can buy natural gas in Kansas.

Scranton was laid out in 1840, and at that time had intentions of becoming the Pittsburg of America. However, the rolling mills moved away in order to be near to Andrew Carnegie, and since then the city has mined coal and picked stamps for a living. It has 120,000 inhabitants, the majority of whom know how to swing a pick. Scranton has many thousand Welsh, English and Irish citizens, but they live together more peaceably than they do across the ocean.

"The earth occasionally faints away beneath the citizen's humble cottage."

Scranton nestles among the 1,200 foot more interesting underground and overhead than it is on the street level. Producing poor miner's sons who have a chance to become president has been its greatest investmountains of eastern Pennsylvania, and is still, but none of them has gotten farther than congress as yet.

Wisdom of the Calf.

(Science.)

A man concerned in educational matters in Tennessee had been consulted as to the agricultural point of view. He made no such mistake as to go to the people with messages of chemistry, botany or zoology, which are the contrary, advocating eminently practical measures. At a meeting held in the hill country he made an address in which he labored long and arduously to prove to the audience that every boy and every girl should know how to milk a cow, and to this end should go to the agricultural college. After wearing himself and the audience pretty well out he threw the meeting open for remarks and discussion. After a painful silence a gaunt old man with hay-colored whiskers, the principal of a theological seminary, arose. "Stranger," said he, "I agree with you that every boy, black or white, should know how to milk a cow. I even agree that every girl should include this art along with her other accomplishments. However, I want to make this suggestion. Wouldn't it be a good thing for a college to teach its students something that a calf couldn't beat 'em at?"

"Examinitis."

(From The American Medicine.)

Let us remember that there is such a thing as examinitis, and that a brain crammed with a multitude of useless facts may show up brilliantly on an examination, but be so clogged as to be unable to put the knowledge to practical use. We know we are raising the pedagogue's ire by thus stating that there is such a thing as too much knowledge, but as a fact the world's work is being done by specialists who are densely ignorant of everything outside their respective narrow spheres—and of many things inside, too.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON,
The Famous Prose Poet

SELECTING A WIFE.

"I am afraid," said the school superintendent, "that young Wigler and his wife are not getting along as well as they should. The neighbors say there is a great deal of scolding in the house."

"I was quite satisfied when they were married," remarked the village patriarch, "that love's young dream would fade in the washing. In fact, some time before the ceremony I tried to hint to Bob Wigler that he wasn't choosing the right kind of a bride, but he didn't properly appreciate my remarks. He said that my gray hairs were all that saved me from having my head placed in the plaster cast."

"That's always the way when an old man tries to give the rising generation the benefit of his experience and observation. Young men don't want wisdom if it happens to conflict with their desires. And especially when young people are in love is the advice of the aged man looked upon as impertinence, and he is fortunate if he gets away without being hit with a brick.

"Every day I see youthful couples gallivanting around, making their preparations for matrimony, and in about half the cases I know that misery will be the result, and I don't claim to be the seventh son of a seventh son, and I don't know a horoscope from a hay rack. I judge things and people by what I have seen and learned. I know that oil and water won't mix, and I know that certain kinds of men and certain kinds of men never can dwell together in harmony, and the man who marries such misfits should go to the county jail for safe keeping.

"Bob Wigler is a sober, grave, studious fellow. He always was that way. When other boys were doing their second story work in watermelon rind he was reading up on astronomy and civil engineering and such things. He'd rather have a volume of his father's encyclopaedia than a dish of ice cream, any time. He kept all that tiring his mind with useful knowledge from childhood to manhood, and yet, with all his knowledge, he hadn't sense enough to see that Winifred Max wasn't the sort of girl he ought to marry.

"That's the discouraging part of the whole business. When a young man celebrated for mining and horse sense hasn't judgment enough to select the right kind of bride, what hope is there for the common every day alecks who don't know enough to come in out of the rain?

"Winifred's highest ambition in this world always was to have a good time. No book ever appealed to her unless she wanted something to throw at the cat, or to prop up a window. An evening at home seemed to her about as desirable as an attack of jumping measles. She wanted to go to the theaters and the ice cream joints, she wanted to ride on merry-go-rounds. She wanted to hit the high portions of the landscape with an automobile. She just suffered to ride in an aeroplane. Anything along that line made a hit with Winifred, but if you wanted her to stay at home and read a book you had to tie her feet to the floor.

"I have no doubt that Bob thought she would get over that when she was married, but girls don't get over such things, any more than the young man with a majestic thirst for soda water gets over it when the hydrant water after the nuptials. The man who marries a dizzy female, hoping that she will settle down and be an ornament to his household, is not a chump as the girl who marries a thirsty young man, hoping to reform him.

"Bob and Winifred were married one bright day in May, and when I saw them going to the depot, to depart on their wedding trip, I reflected bitterly upon the failure of our republican institutions. Under our present system of government a man must stand supinely by and witness such marriages, and he is powerless to do a thing. He can't call out the militia or secure an injunction.

"Such a marriage is a tragedy, by friends. It is bound to result in the fifty-seven varieties of misery so ably described in the Household Encyclopaedia."

To Find Land Areas.

(From The Engineering News.)

Louis V. Mathey, Spot, Tenn., writes us that he has for thirty-four years been obtaining land areas by the simple process of accurately plotting the survey to scale on good paper, then cutting away the paper outside of the boundry with a sharp knife and weighing the folded piece of the tract on a chemist's or jeweler's scale accurately to 1-64 grain. He sends us a sample map of a tract of 16,651 acres, plotted on a scale of 40 rods to the inch, on a sheet of 15 by 24-inch paper, which weighed 42 3-32 grains. While the plan might serve as a rough check on computations, the limit of error in plotting and trimming, as well as in weighing, would make the scheme only applicable where land is of very low value.

PLAN EARLY CLEARING OF PEACHTREE CREEK

Rock and Debris Will Be Taken Out to Facilitate Operation of Sewage Plant.

There will be no halt in the plans of the city to have Peachtree creek cleared of rock and debris to facilitate the operation of the new $195,000 sewage disposal plant.

Further negotiations between Chief R. M. Clayton, of the construction department, and the board of county commissioners will be opened Saturday morning, when the latter will formally ask the board to proceed with the work. The board favorably passed up the project more than a year ago, and, according to Commissioner W. Tom Winn, the only reason the creek has not been cleared is because the city has not pressed its demand.

Shelby Smith, chairman of the board, visited city hall Thursday afternoon to confer with Captain Clayton on some paving contracts let to the Southern Bitulithic company, and incidentally talk over the Peachtree creek work. Captain Clayton was not in his office at the time, so the conference was postponed.

Says Work Should Be Done.

Chairman Smith agrees that the work should be done. He says that the board is interested in the success of the sewage plant, and will do what it can help out.

"I see the work is important," he told The Constitution, "and I agree that it should be done early. But how? That is the question. Every available man for work is busy. We want to get to Peachtree creek just as soon as possible."

Captain Clayton will call attention of the board to the necessity of the work in a letter which he is preparing to write. Alderman John Harwell, chairman of council's sewer committee, will be asked to call a special meeting to confer with the bond committee. The conference will have for its purpose of framing a resolution urging the county commissioners to give the clearing of Peachtree creek immediate attention.

Mayor James G. Woodward will be asked to join with the two bodies. The mayor also believes the work necessary, not only because of its advantage to successful operation of the new plant, but as a safeguard to the health of the residents in that section traversed by the creek.

Serious Menace to Health.

W. A. Harnell, engineer in charge of the three sewage plants, asserts that the creek if allowed to remain clogged up with brush and debris, will be a serious menace to health.

"Mosquitoes will breed by millions unless the effluent is carried without hindrance to the river," he says. "The city is going to put the plant in operation early in September. Only three acres of filter beds will be complete. Therefore the product will not be absolutely non-putrescible, and it will be dangerous to have it stand in the creek."

City officials take the position that the creek should be cleared before the plant is put in operation, even though the expense of the work be burdened on the city.

It is estimated that the work can be done by a gang of ten men in ten days. The cost will not be more than $250. It is one of the smallest details in connection with the plant, and at the same time one of the most important.

DROWNING OF BOY AT LITHIA SPRINGS CHARGED TO NEGRO

Douglasville, Ga., August 21.—(Special.)—A young negro, Will Tally, was placed in jail here last night charged with the murder of Fred Hollingsworth, a young white boy, at Lithia Springs.

Reports indicate that there was a struggle between the boys on the banks of Sweetwater creek, and that the negro struck the white boy and pushed him in the creek where he was drowned.

The negro states that there were several boys in swimming together and when the white boy became strangled, he could not go to the rescue as he could not swim himself.

There was a great deal of excitement when the negro boy was brought here last night, and it was reported that a crowd was coming to lynch the negro, but the excitement soon ceased.

The Hollingsworth family had just moved to the Lithia Springs community a few days ago.

Singers at Barnesville.

Barnesville, Ga., August 21.—(Special.)—There will be a big all-day singing in the auditorium of Gordon Institute Sunday next, and a large crowd is promised. Professor T. H. Newton, Hon. J. S. James and other prominent leaders will be present. There will be dinner provided for the big crowd by people of the community, done.

WESTERN & ATLANTIC SHOWS RECORD GAIN

Gross and Net Earnings for Year Greatly in Excess of Other Roads.

A record gain in the gross and net earnings of the Western and Atlantic railroad for the year just passed was shown in the report submitted to the railroad commission yesterday by H. C. Maney, assistant comptroller of the road.

Gross earnings for the year were $2,195,005.02, as compared with $2,022,112.48, an increase of $272,892.54. The net earnings were $913,184.26, as against $818,519.12 last year, an increase of $95,665.14.

Operating expenses for the year were $1,279,820.76, as compared with $2,103,593.36, an increase for the year of $176,227.40. It will be seen that, in spite of this big increase in operating expenses, the railroad paid a handsome additional profit to the lessees over that last year, showing that the state's property is growing more and more valuable every year.

The advance in gross earnings per mile is $1,979.82, and in the net earnings $691.90 per mile.

Three Times Other Roads.

The gross earnings per mile were $23,337.27, which is much the largest of any railroad in the state. Attention to this fact was called by Campbell Wallace, secretary of the railroad commission, who said that the gross earnings of the Southern, the Central of Georgia and the Atlantic Coast Line were only $8,000 per mile. The net earnings of the Western and Atlantic show approximately the same ratio as compared with those of other roads.

The rental paid to the state of Georgia by the lessees is $420,012 per year. Deducting this from the net earnings of the road, it will be seen that the profit to the lessees is $493,172.26, or approximately half a million per year.

Legislative Commission.

The lease expires in 1919, and a joint commission of the house and senate, with two to be appointed by the governor, has been provided for to investigate the conditions of the road and to make recommendations as to the terms of the new lease, etc. Of this commission, Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd, is chairman.

Following is the financial report in full:

Gross earnings, 1913, $3,193,005.02; 1912, $2,922,112.48.

Operating expenses, 1913, $2,279,-820.76; 1912, $2,103,593.36.

Net earnings, 1913, $913,184.25; 1912, $818,519.12.

Gross earnings per mile, 1913, $23,-337.27; 1912, $21,357.35.

Operating expenses per mile, 1913, $16,662.92; 1912, $15,374.76.

Net earnings per mile, 1913, $6,674.35; 1912, $5,982.45.

SLAIN JUDGE'S BEQUEST TO DEFEND SLAYER

Divorced Mrs. Godbee's Children to Use Their Share of Estate in Mother's Trial.

Savannah, Ga., August 21.—(Special.) Judge Walter S. Godbee's estate, valued at between $45,000 and $50,000, will be divided among his children under the terms of his will.

A daughter by the first wife, formerly Miss Maggie Godbee, but now married and living in Augusta, will get most of the property. Small portions of the estate are left to Frank and King Godbee, sons of the divorced wife, and to Miss Sarah Godbee, daughter of the divorced wife.

The bequeathing of some of the estate to the children of the divorced Mrs. Godbee, who killed Judge Godbee and his wife, presumably means that funds bequeathed in the judge's will will be used to defend the woman who killed him. The slayer of Judge and Mrs. Godbee is in the Jenkins county jail awaiting indictment by the grand jury. She is without funds, but her children, Frank, King and Sarah, are taking her part. The money they derive from the estate probably will go to defend her.

Acting on the application made yesterday, Judge R. C. Robb, ordinary, this morning appointed Frank Godbee temporary administrator of the estate of Judge Godbee, and A. S. Anderson as temporary administrator of the estate of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee, the slain woman. The will has been in possession of W. B. Wallace, one of Judge Godbee's friends and advisers.

Archibald Boyer, a brother of the slain Mrs. Godbee, passed through Savannah today en route to Millen. He expressed the feelings of his mother, declaring that he wanted to see justice done.

WANT ATLANTA LAWYER FOR NEW JUDGESHIP

A committee representing members of the Atlanta bar called yesterday morning on Governor Slaton to formally present a petition asking that he name the judge of the newly-created Atlanta circuit, the choice to be made "from among the practicing lawyers of the Atlanta bar who have been residents of Fulton county for a period of at least three years."

Governor Slaton read the statement of the committee, but did not express himself other than to state that he would take the matter under advisement and give the question thorough consideration, not indicating when he would make the appointment.

A petition has already been filed with the governor urging the appointment of Judge L. S. Roan for the place, and the choice now seems to be between Judge Roan on the one side or someone who, as a resident of Atlanta for the past three years and a practicing attorney of the Atlanta bar, comes under the terms of the petition presented yesterday.

The movement represented in the petition was in charge of a committee of the Atlanta bar, whose statement is as follows:

To His Excellency, Honorable John M. Slaton, Governor of the State of Georgia.

We, the undersigned committee, representing a large majority of the members of the Atlanta bar, hereby respectfully transmit to you a petition to appoint to the recently-created fourth judicial circuit of our superior court an Atlanta lawyer who has practiced at the Atlanta bar sufficiently long to thoroughly identify him with it; to the end that all may know that we have in our midst men fully capable of occupying this high and honorable position. This resolution was offered at a meeting of members of the bar, at which this committee was appointed and has been signed by those members of the bar whose names are appended thereto.

We feel especially free to suggest to you as to the appointee to be named by you, feeling sure that we can safely leave this to your judgement, particularly in view of the fact that you have for many years been one of the most active members of our bar and are therefore intimately acquainted with the qualifications and personal standing of members.

We think it proper also to call your attention to the fact that a compliance with this request will not increase the present salaries or compensation of Honorable L. S. Roan, the judge of the Stone Mountain circuit, since the act of the general assembly providing for the appointment of the fourth judge of the Atlanta circuit in nowise affects the act creating the Stone Mountain circuit, which provides that the judge of that circuit shall receive the same salary and fees for the fourth judge in all respects similar to the act of 1909, providing for the appointment of the third judge in this circuit, and no more effects Judge Roan's position or compensation than that act did.

Terrell, Winfield Jones, Albert Howell, Jr., Richard B. Russell, Shepard Bros., Turner Dodd, Victor Lamar Smith, George Westmoreland, E. V. Carter, Samuel B. Hewlett, Samuel Neahr, Robert P. Jones, Jesse M. Wood, H. M. Datty.

The Petition.

Whereas, a bill has been recently passed by the general assembly providing for the appointment by the governor of a fourth judge of the Atlanta circuit, and

Whereas, vacation to the bench has been ever regarded as a just reward for faithful, efficient and efficient service as an attorney, which has worthily endeared the character and judicial fitness, and

Whereas, there are among the practicing lawyers of the Atlanta bar residing in Fulton county many men as fully qualified by faithfulness of service, judicial fitness to fill the office of such a position as can be found in the state, therefore, the undersigned members of the Atlanta bar hereby petition his excellency, the governor of Georgia, to appoint the fourth judge of the Atlanta circuit from among the practicing lawyers of the Atlanta bar who have been residents of Fulton county for a period of at least three years.

Every Woman Should Be Present At Dairy Instruction Lectures

By Isma Dooly

Every woman in Atlanta who keeps house, who wants to keep healthy, who wants to rear healthy babies, should attend the two lectures which will be given today on the dairy instruction car of the Southern railroad. The car is on the tracks under the Terminal Station, and is easily reached through the space to the right side of the Plaza.

Yesterday the lectures were especially designed to instruct the dairymen and farmers, though every word of the lecture, and the informal discussion following was profitable and interesting. The car is fitted up with the latest inventions for the proper care, preservation and development of dairy products. There is literature being distributed, and the walls are hung with beauties of the cattle kingdom that out-reach the proverbial $10,000 beauty class. There are lessons in dairying and farming placarded and easily memorized, and one can take them in their minds and keep them forever.

Program for Today.

The program today is especially designed to interest the consumer, and the lecturer is at all times ready to answer questions he talks.

You may think you know all about washing out the milk bottles in which your milk is put up by the dairyman brings it, and all that you know just what to do with it afterwards, but even with all that knowledge, if you go to the dairy car today you will hear some simple things which can be easily done that you will take nothing for knowing, and you and the baby and every member of the family will be the better for knowing it.

Do not imagine that the lecture is made up of dry facts that you are shown milk in rows of microbes at that you will be fed continually what not to do. You will find it a still rather highly entertaining, and you will appreciate more than ever before the vital usefulness of the cow, and you will learn forward and listen attentively and inspired to the mysteries of milk and what it means—things about it you have never heard before. The idea of the cow necessary for milk will cease to seem a drudgery, and you will make up your mind that your home will not be complete until you have your own cow in the back yard and know just as much about her as the expert dairyman does about his. And your interest will extend; you will want the women of your state to know about it, and you will find yourself pondering what you can do to promote the cattle industry in Georgia.

Two Lectures Slated.

The lecture begins at 10 in the morning and there will be another at 2:30 in the afternoon. The car will move on with its message into west Tennessee, so that today is the only one in which Atlanta consumers can get the good word directly.

Stop and consider how much typhoid fever costs the people of Georgia each year. It is a disease no more confined to the poor than to the rich, and directly traceable to flies, impure milk and impure water. The women of the state are the one to whom these cares come, and it is up to them to post themselves with just such information as the dairy instruction car can give on these subjects. Then they can the better preach the doctrine that the course of prevention will yield a thousand-fold in wealth and happiness.

Washington Seminary
SOME OF ITS STRONG FEATURES

Some of the distinctive features of Washington Seminary, Atlanta, that commend it strongly to parents seeking the best in the education of their daughters, are:

1. The exceptionally beautiful and complete equipment in grounds, buildings, furnishings and school appliances of all kinds—all on the scale of the most elegant private homes.

2. The limited boarding department, which enables the principals to make the school in reality a home for the students.

3. The personal nature of the instruction, secured by dividing classes into small sections, averaging about twelve girls to the class.

4. The OPEN AIR class rooms, connecting with each recitation room, used in all seasonable weather. The school work is thus done actually out-of-doors most of the year—a fine health feature.

Public Spirit and Crackers

¶ When you help your town, you help yourself—you make it a better place to live.

¶ You can help Atlanta best by using Atlanta-made goods.

¶ You can show a deal of first-class public spirit in the buying of crackers and biscuits, for instance.

¶ If you could get a better cracker or biscuit by buying one that's made over seas, or a thousand miles from home, of course there would be a reason for patronizing far-away folks.

¶ But you can't do it. BLOCK'S Atlanta-made are the equal of the best that ever crossed a grocer's counter.

¶ We believe in public spirit. But, we believe in Quality just as much. When you can combine the two, why not do it?

WHIFFS

The Real Blow.

THE DIXIE league has been struck its first real blow. And to run in Atlanta, it must be an outlaw. The local Southern league club has refused to give its permission to the new organization to enter Atlanta. Under the rules of the national commission, this bars them here, unless they enter as an outlaw. And if they do this, the incorporators in the other cities will balk, as they have stated they do not propose to be connected with an outlaw organization.

Congratulations.

HUGH W. ROBERTS, sporting editor of The Birmingham Age Herald, and dean of the southern league scribes, announces the arrival of an heir to his estate. Miss Roberts entered this vale of tears Thursday morning. Congratulations, Hugh, old boy. The Constitution's assistant sporting editor, Dick, Jr., also sends his best.

Who Is It?

BOBBY GILKS and Billy Gilbert, ex-Crackers of the Southern league, have been in Atlanta for the past few days looking over several members of the Cracker team. They have in mind is not known, and big league scouts never trip these hands. But if we were playing a hand, Harry Welchonce, Harry Chapman and Bivington Bleland are the ones that would attention. We would not be surprised to hear of their sale any day.

Deserved Compliment.

HONEST BILL Hart, the veteran indicator handler, is a Harry Chapman booster. Believe me, that boy is one sweet catcher," declared Bill the other day. He knows how to catch, he can throw with any of them, and he can hit that ball a mile. He's a gentleman, he can't. He's a gentleman, mail at that, but when there are men on the old sacks."

How He Looked.

"IF CARL THOMPSON knows as much stuff as he and Joe put that he showed on the mound Thursday, that he pitched against Bill Prough, he's going to stick with the New York American league club for keeping. Bill Hart the indicator, Bill Hart Thompson showed more stuff than he had seen in a month of sundays."

Get Out Extra.

INSTEAD of writing in the story of the Chattanooga games, Ellerbeid was put out of the game for kicking. It might be a good idea to make mention of the days in which he stays the full nine innings. Without not condemning the kid at all, for anyone loves a fighter, if you can't stick up for yourself no one will. But evidently the kid has been carrying his stuff too far. The only games he has stuck up for from the last week were the ones Wednesday with Nashville, that he did not play in.

It Is to Laugh.

THE CLAIMS of certain white heavyweights that they are the best of their class is generally good for a laugh. "dark cloudy" Jack Johnson, Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette, who are, in our humble opinion, the masters of any of the white heavyweights. The title of "white heavyweight champion" is an empty honor. No matter what the settlement in the matter, until he is either defeated or retires permanently, Jack Johnson is the real heavyweight champion of the world.

Looks Suspicious.

THE BOUT between Jack Johnson and George Carpentier, the French light heavyweight, looks crooked. We said that before the bout was pulled off, but large odds of coin of the realm on their champion. Maybe we are bad judges, that's getting the better of their judgment, but it looks that way to us. If Carpentier, with his 25 pounds heavier than Klaus and other American middleweights, should happen to win over Johnson, he would be the master of the world. Johnson's finish are getting pretty thin, and even if he is barred from appearing in London music halls, he is likely to "take a flop" if the inducements are sufficiently alluring.

Some Consolation.

NASHVILLE scribes are bidding themselves up with the belief that "What's Mobile done with the Southern league pennant? They still have a championship baseball club in the South." Which is just by way of forgetting the sorrowful thing that has just happened, and thinking of the bright side of the future.

Billies and Locals Split; Double-Header Thursday; Both Teams Hammer Ball

By Dick Jemison.

The Crackers and the Billies, in their first meeting to decide the ultimate holders of the second place position in the league, broke even in the double header they played Thursday at Ponce de Leon, the locals winning the first 6 to 2, and the visitors the second, 6 to 0.

Both games were hard hitting affairs, with some outfield errors figuring prominently in the victories. These bobbles came just at the turning points in the game, and were very costly.

The hitting of Bisland, Smith and Chapman and McDowell featured the two contests.

Bisland slammed out six consecutive runs, grounding out in his seventh attempt. He batted his average until he entered the select .300 circle as the result.

McDowell was safe on an error the first time up. The next five times he hit safely. And then he was retired three times, sacrificing once. He got five hits in seven at bats.

Smith connected for four singles in six times up, while Chapman got three Elwert and Bisland and sheestring catches featured the outfield play and Welchonce were the fielding features.

The First Game.

The Crackers pounded Curly Brown from the rubber in the fourth inning of the first game and kept up the heavy artillery on Chuck Case, who followed him, connecting for fourteen times safely during the frolic.

On the other hand, Gil Price got better as he went along and in the last four innings the Billikens were eating out of his hand.

The Billies counted their first run in the third inning. Gribbens opened with a double to right field. McDowell slammed one by Bisland for a single. Elwert waited. Wallop Smith made a sacrifice hit, Smith stole third, then threw badly to first, Gribbens scoring.

The Crackers tied it in their half. Gil Price smashed a single to left field and when Jantzen let the ball get through him he continued to second.

The Crackers made three in their fourth. Wallop Smith lined one to the bull for three cushions and counted when Bisland hit a double to the same place. Holland got a Cincinnati it when the play was made to third for Bisland. Harry got second on a short passed ball and both continued when Chapman poled a sharp single to left.

The Billies put their final two runs in the fifth. McDowell beat out a bunt, but was forced by Wares. Elwert tripled, scoring Wares, and came home when Jantzen singled.

In their half, the Crackers got the two back. Case hit a double. He went to third when Welchonce grounded out to first. Smith beat out a hit to short, scoring Case. While the Billikens were arguing about the play Wallop swiped second and scored when Bisland singled to left.

In the eighth the Crackers got two more. Bisland and Holland got infield singles. Holland sacrificed them to a base and Chapman drove them both in with a single to center.

The Second Game.

Carl Thompson and Manning former Georgia and Auburn stars, had another one of their battles in the fourth game. Neither pitched a game that they could brag about, but Thompson got the best support and the Billies copped as the result.

The Crackers grabbed off a two-run lead for Thompson in the first inning and got another in the fifth. Welchonce walked and when Smith beat out an infield hit the runs were piled. Bisland followed with a single, scoring Smith, sending in Long and Welchonce and Smith to third. Wallop was smothered at the plate on Holland's top to third.

The Billies got one back in the second. Knaupp doubled to right and went to third when Manush, who is subbing for Calvo, the Cuban being injured by a pitched ball in the first game, let the ball get by him. He counted when Snedecor bounded to Agler. Joe could not throw the ball to either base or first, so he did not have a good hold on it and was afraid of throwing it wild.

They tied it up in their third. With two down, Gribbens landed four wallops to Elwert, who stole, scoring on Sloan's single.

The Crackers got the lead again in their half. Smith and Bisland got singles, (Bizzy's sixth straight.) Holland sacrificed them both up. Manush tried to McDowell. Smith scoring, but Bisland was caught between third and second and run down.

The Billies tied it up again in their half of the fifth. Gribbens singled and counted when Manning doubled. The Crackers had a fine chance to go ahead in their half, but Bisland evidently had all the hits out of his system for one day.

Tommy Bobbles Two.

Then came the disastrous sixth. Sloan slammed one through Thompson for a single. Jantzen pickled one to left. Long fumbled and both men got an extra base. Knaupp scored Sloan with a sacrifice fly. Snedecor singled to left and when Long let the ball get through him, both Jantzen and Snedecor counted.

It was getting too dark at this stage and right after the Crackers had their sixth, Buddy called it.

A pitcher's battle is in store for the fans today, which is also ladies' day. Elmer Brown, the Billikens' 47-pod beauty, will probably twirl against Elliott Dent, the Crackers' big right-hander.

If both these boys are "right," one run will come mighty near winning this old ball game. The contest starts at 3:30 o'clock.

Zellars, of Mercer university, today announced the acceptance of Lewie Hardage, a graduate of Vanderbilt in 1913, as coach at Mercer to succeed Dr. C. C. Stroud, who resigned to go to the University of Louisiana. He is an all-round athlete, and Mercer considers her self fortunate in securing him.

Sixteen Nations Organize An Amateur Federation

Berlin, August 21.—The "International Athletic federation" was formally organized here today, the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, South America, Egypt, Belgium, France, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Hungary, Austria and Switzerland being the charter members.

J. S. Edstrom, of Sweden, is slated for the federation's presidency. The delegates adopted statutes which define the functions of the association as "the drafting of rules governing athletic competitions, the registering of world, Olympic and national records and the drafting of a common definition of an amateur."

The delegate also showed a desire to exercise an influence over future Olympic games by the appointment of a committee on Olympic games under the chairmanship of S. G. Moss.

The American delegates are President Gustavus T. Kirby and Secretary James E. Sullivan, of the Amateur Athletic union; Colonel Robert M. Thompson and Joseph B. McCabe. In the new federation Mr. Sullivan is chairman of the committee on rules, and Mr. Kirby is a member of the committee on the definition of an amateur, which is under the chairmanship of Frans Reichel, of France.

The federation will meet biennially, beginning with a congress to be held at Paris in 1914. It will act in the interim by a council composed of seven members elected for four years.

The deliberations thus far have been harmonious. Ticklish questions, such as penalties for false starts, the elimination of walking events and amateur-versus shot-putting, as well as the definition of the amateur status have not yet been reached.

The proceedings are being conducted principally in English, the general international athletic language, and then translated into German for the benefit of the Kaiser, who does not understand the English language.

FOREIGN ATHLETIC TEAMS TO ATTEND PANAMA-PACIFIC

Berlin, August 21.—James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic union, today obtained the promise that a team of German athletes would be sent to San Francisco in 1915 to attend the Panama Pacific exposition in 1916. In return for this courtesy, it is considered likely that the American team which is to compete in the Greek Olympic games in Athens in the spring of 1914, will make a trip to Berlin and participate in an athletic meet there.

Representatives of France, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland gave assurances to Mr. Sullivan during the afternoon that their countries would be represented at the exposition by teams of athletes. Hungary also will probably send a team.

THAW IS SCHEMING TO BAFFLE NEW YORK

were well satisfied with the events of today. They feel now that Thaw's fate, so far as the Canadian authorities may influence it, is practically settled. The departure for Ottawa early this morning of W. L. Shurtleff was the first step in a plan to produce Thaw's removal from Canada without prolonged legal proceedings.

All of the lawyers profess to believe that the minister of the interior will accede to the request that Thaw be permitted to "nominate his destination" in return for submitting without further protest to deportation.

Those who are advising Thaw, among them some of the ablest criminal lawyers in Canada, said tonight that they were confident the government will welcome such a solution of the problem. No one contends that Thaw has violated a single law of the dominion, unless it be that law which provides that no alien may enter Canada without special permit within five years after he has been an inmate of an asylum for the insane.

In the event that such an alien has entered by railroad that it is understood, provides that he shall be transported to the capital of the last state through which he passed prior to the crossing of the frontier. But Thaw did not enter by any train. He came behind a wind-blown horse, and when captured he was nearer Vermont than any other state of the union. Already the immigration authorities have arranged to hold a hearing at Coaticook, the nearest point to the Vermont border, whenever Thaw may fall into their hands.

Vermont to Get Thaw.

The plan of Thaw's lawyers—and there is reason to believe that they have had assurances of its success—is to have Thaw examined before this board and ordered deported to Montpelier. Thaw would prefer Vermont to any other state, as a refuge. Investigation made in his behalf has convinced those working in his interests that Vermont would afford the most involved extradition proceedings.

The New York authorities, while exerting pressure at Ottawa to bring about Thaw's deportation to the New York border, if possible, or to have him transferred to Montreal as a prisoner of the immigration department, nevertheless, have anticipated the Vermont contingency, and sent there Deputy Sheriff Mack, former district attorney of Dutchess county, to arrange for possible hearings.

Details of Thaw's trip on the night before he was arrested near Coaticook were obtained today by immigration officials who went over the ground in search of witnesses to use against "Mitchell Thompson," under arrest on a charge of aiding and abetting Thaw, a lunatic, to enter Canada.

According to these officials, Thaw, when he left the train at Beecher Falls, Vt., had supper with his two companions, one of whom was Thompson. After supper they hired a rig and drove to Derby Line. They then doubled back and crossed the frontier into Canada.

Had to Forsake Rig.

The roads were of the old corduroy variety and the horses soon exhausted. When 2 miles from Line on the Canadian side, the party was compelled to forsake the rig and hire another from an old French-Canadian farmer, Octave Hodeau. The best that Hodeau could give them was one horse and a rickety buggy. Even with this they made slow progress over the bad roads till St. Herménegilde-Dartford was reached, when Thaw was arrested.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, Thaw's brother-in-law and sister left town today. Mrs. Thaw, the mother, would not come here, they said.

"We shall retain the best available counsel for Harry," said Mr. Carnegie. "And we are well pleased with the progress of the case to date. Of course it would have been very fine if Harry could have secured his freedom without all this trouble, but I feel certain that his days of confinement now are very few. In leaving here I am worried my wife and I feel that we can be of no more help at present. I have telegraphed to Harry's mother that there is no need of her coming here."

Asked point-blank just before he stepped on the train if the Thaw family would interfere in the men who managed Thaw's escape by automobile, Carnegie shrugged his shoulders and said:

"Well, of course, we expect to do the proper thing."

BRYAN SENDS TELEGRAM TO BRITISH MINISTER

Washington, August 21.—Without authority to make a formal request in the name of the United States government for the delivery of Harry K. Thaw by the Canadian authorities, Secretary Bryan today has responded to Acting Governor Glynn's appeal for assistance in the effort to bring the Matteawan fugitive back into New York by sending the following personal telegram to the British ambassador, Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice, now at Dublin, New Hampshire:

"We are informed that Harry K. Thaw, who lately escaped from an insane asylum in New York in which he was confined after acquittal of murder on the ground of insanity, is in custody of the Dominion police with a view to his deportation under the Canadian immigration laws. The department, while not in a position to make a request in the matter, which, in its present aspect, is not within our extradition treaties, brings it to your notice with a view to such action as the Canadian authorities may find themselves justified in taking."

Copies of Secretary Bryan's telegram to the ambassador were forwarded to Acting Governor Glynn and Attorney General Carmody.

Secretary Bryan carefully avoided taking any part in New York's controversy over the governorship, addressing the letter to "Martin H. Glynn, State Capitol, Albany, N. Y."

Jock McNeil.

The body of Jock McNeil, the motorcycle rider who met death at the Motordrome Monday afternoon while taking a practice spin, was interred at West View Thursday afternoon before a large crowd of admirers of the intrepid Scotchman. The floral offerings were some of the handsomest ever seen in Atlanta. The riders at the local track acted as the pallbearers. It was announced Thursday that Friday 29 would be Jock McNeil benefit day at the 'drome, all riders and officials serving gratis, and the entire proceeds going to McNeil's mother in Scotland.

Death Spread by Naval Gun.

Pola, Austria, August 21.—An 8-inch naval gun burst during a test here today, killing three omcers, fatally wounding six others and injuring a score more. Among the wounded is Admiral Count Van Wellenburg, of the Austrian navy, president of the naval technical committee. The gun carried a charge of about 150 pounds.

SPECIAL MESSAGE ON MEXIC MUDDLE

sage. The administration hopes that when the facts are known in Mexico the Huerta authorities may be more inclined to respect the American suggestions.

The American Propositions.

The United States, in brief, has proposed that Huerta resign in favor of a provisional president acceptable to al sides; that a suspension of hostilities thereby be brought about and a constitutional election held, the resulting administration to receive the recognition of the American government.

Thus far Huerta has flatly rejected the American proposals and renewed his demand for recognition, declaring his financial troubles are due to the failure of the United States to recognize him. Official advices to the state department, however, describe the provisional president's plight financially as desperate and officials here believe he has not sufficient money to pay his troops and cannot get money abroad.

These considerations and the incessant warfare of the constitutionalists likewise led administration officials to the conclusion that even though Huerta may continue to scorn the suggestions of the United states, the situation in Mexico soon will disentangle itself and that a policy of non-interference should be maintained for the present at least.

No Armed Intervention.

It is not known yet whether President Wilson will make any specific recommendations in his message, but it was learned from a high government official that his statement of the case will be foundation for the next step on the part of the United States. The president has made it plain, however, that he has no thought of armed intervention and that he is as determined as ever to maintain an attitude of peace and friendliness toward Mexico.

Mr. Lind probably will remain in Mexico City indefinitely, and his reports indicate that he has not abandoned hope. President Wilson told callers during the day that the envoy was not in the least disturbed by the situation and that he had handled it with admirable tact and discretion.

The president is undecided yet whether he will make extended comment in his message or allow his recital of the facts as disclosed in the exchange of notes between Lind and Huerta to serve as a reiteration of his views.

He will work on the message all day tomorrow, confining himself to callers in order to complete the task as quickly as possible. It is possible that he will talk the communication over with members of the congressional foreign relations committee when it is finished.

Penrose Very Bellicose.

Senator Penrose tonight addressed a letter to Secretary Bryan, demanding that he immediately telegraph Provisional President Huerta and General Carranza, the constitutionalist leader, warning them that the American government will hold them personally responsible for any harm inflicted upon Americans at Chihuahua, who have been threatened by revolutionists.

Shirley C. Hulse, son-in-law of Lieutenant Governor Reynolds, of Pennsylvania, and his family are among the refugees from Chihuahua. The Cleveland group at the plant of the Mexican Northern Power and Irrigation company.

Earlier in the day Secretary Bryan had sent to Senator Penrose a consular report stating that revolutionists had announced their intention of executing the engineer of the plant without trial if he again impounded water in the power companys' dam. Tonight the secretary said he had not received Senator Penrose's letter, but that telegrams as strong as the one he could wish already had been sent by the department and that a letter had been prepared this evening diving him the substance of the messages sent.

A number of refugees from the states of Durango and Tampico are now at the seaport Tampico, whence they will sail for New Orleans next Sunday, according to report today to the state department. The Seymour-Taylor family of the Chihuahua colony, concerning whom inquiries were made, were reported safe and well.

Ninety Americans, including forty-five women and children in Empalmo, on the west coast, can leave by train for Nogales, Ariz, whenever they desire, the consular agent at Guaymas reported today.

CONFERENCE IS HELD BY LIND AND GAMBOA

Mexico City, August 21.—Officially Mexico continues silent regarding the negotiations with the representative of President Wilson, John Lind, although the public has been given to understand that they still are in progress.

Mr. Lind has shown no indication of early departure and the conference between him and Foreign Minister Gamboa, which have been held at intervals, serve as a basis for the statement that cordial relations prevail.

The conference between Mr. Lind and the foreign minister was held this afternoon, but as usual the nature of the conversation was not revealed.

HE MURDERED FAMILY AND FIRED HIS HOME

Then It Is Alleged That Henry Sterneis Leaped Into Flames.

Dubuque, Iowa, August 21.—Charges that Henry Sternweis, a wealthy farmer, murdered his wife and three children, set fire to his farm property and then leaped into the flames were made tonight by Coroner Voelker and other officials after a day's investigation of the tragedy northwest of here early today. Four bodies, burned beyond recognition, were recovered from the ruins. The charred body is believed to be that of the 9-year-old son.

A belief that the fire was of incendiary origin resulted from the discovery that the barn, which was wholly destroyed, a granary, was found to have been sprinkled with kerosene. The fire in the granary failed to burn because the doors were so tightly closed.

Sternweis, who was said to be worth $100,000, had not lived happily with his wife for some time, according to the neighbors.

FARMERS' UNION WILL DISCUSS PROPOSAL TO MOVE HEADQUARTERS

Alma, Ga., August 21.—A picnic and Farmers' union rally will be held here Saturday and will be attended by Hon. C. S. Barrett, J. J. Brown and others. A movement is on foot to move the headquarters of the Farmers' union to south Georgia, and Alma may be selected as the point to which it will be given as to whether or not it will move here.

ALTOLOMA is situated just beyond Decatur, on the Georgia railroad and the Stone Mountain electric car line, both of which cut through the very heart of ALTOLOMA, distance of nearly 1,900 feet. ALTOLOMA is on the "New York to Atlanta Highway." ALTOLOMA has three churches. ALTOLOMA has a handsome public school building, which has just been completed at a cost of $8,000. ALTOLOMA is close to Agnes Scott College and the new Lamar College. ALTOLOMA contains more than 350 beautiful lots, ranging in size from QUARTER-ACRE TRACTS to FIVE-ACRE TRACTS. Many of these tracts have running water. ALTOLOMA is unusually high and dry and enjoys perfect drainage throughout.

STONE MOUNTAIN ELECTRIC CAR LINE IS FAST NEARING COMPLETION.

The Georgia Railway and Power Company is extending the Decatur car line to Stone Mountain as fast as money, men and material can accomplish the work. It will be only a few weeks until this company will be operating its cars to ALTOLOMA, and just as soon as the first car makes its initial trip the price of every lot remaining unsold in ALTOLOMA will advance TEN TO THIRTY PER CENT. Don't wait until the shrewd speculators have picked all the plums and forced both prices and terms far beyond your reach.

COTTON ACTIVE BUT UNSETTLED

Predictions of Rain in South This Week and Realizing Made Market Easy Late in the Session.

New York, August 21.—The cotton market was very active again today, but more or less unsettled and after making new high ground for the movement, eased off under private predictions of rain in the south before the end of the week and heavy realizing. The close was steady, not unchanged to 3 points higher.

Private cables stated that a small failure in Liverpool was without any particular influence, but that development probably helped to unsettle the English market, which was several points lower than due at the hour of the local opening.

Prices here started steady at a decline of 4 points on the near months, which were influenced by the cables, while later conditions were 1 to 3 points higher on over night buying orders, the execution of which carried the general list 5 or 6 points above the closing figure of yesterday during the first few minutes. Many recent buyers appeared to be taking profits, however, and rumors that the spot basis in the western belt was slightly easier on yesterday's advance in futures, created some reactionary sentiment.

Prices quickly eased off after the call, but after showing a net loss of 6 or 7 points firmed up again on the dry weather belt reports and detailed weather reports showing continued high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma as well as dry, warm weather in Alabama. New Orleans, Memphis and Wall street houses were big buyers on this advance, which sent prices up to 14 points net higher, with October contracts selling at 11.69, or 77 points above the low level of last week, and within 12 points of the high price reached since they touched 10.81, the low level of last April.

Realizing became increasingly active later and there were reactions of 10 or 13 points in the late trading, on the optimistic weather views of local map readers and further reports of an easier spot basis in the south.

New Orleans Cotton.

New Orleans, August 21.—The cotton market at times today had a strong tendency upward, but on the whole was somewhat irregular, both above and below the level of yesterday's close. The early strength was based on continued drouth in the western belt and the partial taking of buyers of the last few days who were satisfied with their profits. On the other hand, inclined traders were disposed to put out their short lines before the week-end, in order to avoid, for several, scrutiny past, but it was based on the technical position of the market rather than on any change in weather conditions. Many said that the market was getting over bought. It was quite generally believed that the bulk of the short interest had been eliminated.

On the opening, the list of prices were 1 to 5 points up on the dry weather belief. Cables were much better than due, and attention was paid to the English market.

A small failure in the English market also failed to have any effect, and after the first market stood 2 to 7 points up, but in the afternoon, predicting rain in the eastern and the western belt, eliminated selling and the market slowed down to a net advance of 6 to 9 points under yesterday's close. Buying on sensational reports of drouth in Texas, Oklahoma and Alabama and the fact that the latter and they lifted prices again in the late months going 9 points over yesterday's close. PRAISE MANAGEMENT OF STATE SANITARIUM

Members of Legislative Committee Finds Things Cleaned Up and in Fine Order.

Representative J. R. P. Thompson, of Madison county, chairman of the house committee on the state sanitarium, passed through Atlanta yesterday after a trip of inspection by his committee to the insane asylum in Milledgeville.

Mr. Thompson was enthusiastic about what he saw of the management of the sanitarium while in Milledgeville, a larger appropriation to take care of the patients is needed, he thinks.

Dr. S. W. Farriss, representative from Walker county, who is also a member of the committee, was with Mr. Thompson. He confirmed all that the chairman said about the excellent management of the sanitarium and the need of greater liberality on the part of the state.

PEACHTREE OILING TO BEGIN SATURDAY

All Possible Haste Will Be Exercised to Finish Work Within Two Days.

Oiling of Peachtree road from Brookwood to Buckhead will be started Saturday morning.

Chairman Shelby Smith, of the county commissioners, announced Thursday that convicts would be on the job before the end of the week, and all haste possible will be exercised to finish within two days after starting. The street will be treated with a California product.

The commissioners say that the road, when finished, will be as fine as any in the south. The bed was recently broken up and made over, and with a substantial binder on it, it will last a number of years.

The stone crushed purchased by the city reached the city Thursday, and will be installed at Tenth and Boulevard. It will be used to crush the stone for the Butler street sewer, now in the process of construction. The county has about 140 men at work on the sewer.

Moreland avenue was finished up Thursday afternoon. President Ingram, of the Southern Bitulithic company, who has the contract with the county for the work, inspected the paving. He also looked over Marietta street and Georgia avenue.

INDUSTRIAL BUREAU BUSY BOOSTING CITY

Since the recent establishment of the industrial and statistical bureau of the chamber of commerce, W. H. Leahy, head of the department, has received hundreds of enquiries from every section of the United States from manufacturers and others, wishing to locate in Atlanta.

Mr. Leahy is giving each one of these his personal attention, and has sent out numerous replies as to climate, business, conditions, population, school census, bank deposits and clearings, weekly payroll, and everything of interest pertaining to the business and home life of Atlanta.

No matter whom the party writing is, whether manufacturer or laborer, a determined effort is being made to bring that party here, and the bureau is going out of the way to gather the specific information asked.

W. C. MANGUM TO RUN TO KEEP HIS OFFICE

Sheriff W. C. Mangum will be a candidate to succeed himself at the election to be held next June.

A persistent rumor current for several days to the effect that he would not stand for re-election because of his health, caused Sheriff Mangum to make the positive announcement that his hat will be in the ring next June, and he declares that his health at present is just as good as he wishes it to be.

Friends of Plennie Miner, chief deputy under the Mangum administration, and one of the most likable officers in the county, says that he will enter the race, despite the fact that he has refrained from making a statement of his intentions. Rumor also says that John Owens and Drew Lydell are being urged by their friends to enter the race.

Wanted—An Offer on 290 Myrtle Street

When a bargain in real estate is put on the market there are always certain conditions that are brought to bear upon the present owner, making it essential that a disposal be made of the property at once. If these conditions were not of a pressing nature the property would never be offered at anything like the present price.

The persons who always come out ahead on these trades are the ones who size up these conditions for what they are worth and take advantage of them at once.

On one of Atlanta's prettiest streets—Myrtle street—we offer a 10-room home on a corner lot, 60x190 feet, faces east and is elevated. This home is absolutely up to date in all respects.

The owner is in such condition that a disposal must be made of this property. Make us an offer and we will submit it, regardless of what it is.

CITY ASKS FOR BIDS ON REFRESHMENT STAND

Bids for the construction of a brick and concrete refreshment stand to be erected in Grant park to replace the structure destroyed by fire, will be opened by the improvement committee of the park board the first Tuesday in September.

The committee met Thursday afternoon at the park office. The plans drawn by Nents & Reed, architects, were accepted. The building will be of pressed brick and concrete, and will cost in the neighborhood of $8,500. Aside from its architectural beauty, the stand will be comfortable. The pavillion will be larger than the old stand. The roof of the building will be of Dutch design. The committee instructed the architect to advertise immediately for the bids.
